Oshawa Auto Workers to Meet With Premier on His Terms.

Lewis Wins Praise Of U. A. W. Board

Thompson and Martin to Confer Here Today on Hepburn Stand.

By William V. Nessly.

Strikers in General Motors plants in Canada yesterday agreed to peace conferences under conditions interpreted as virtual, if temporary, repudiation of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. At the same time, however, the executive board of the auto workers' union, which called the strike, at a meeting here adopted a resolution of appreciation and support for Lewis and the C. I. O.

Dispatches from Oshawa, Ontario, scene of the strike, said the representatives of the workers had agreed to meet today with Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, determined foe of the C. I. O., and company officials to discuss peace, and would not represent or be under instructions from the Lewis organization.

Thompson, Martin to Talk.

At the same time, Hugh Thompson, C. I. O. organizer, who has been directing the strike, was on his way here to confer today with Homer Martin, president of the C. I. O.-affiliated United Automobile Workers. Premier Hepburn, who has repeatedly declared he would not deal with "any of Lewis' hirelings," said he had been advised that Martin and Thompson would not return to Canada until negotiations were completed.

Martin, who had canceled, at the last minute, plans to speed to Oshawa to be there while yesterday's conference was held, said that "after a settlement is reached" he would go to Oshawa to address the workers.

The peace meeting today, the Associated Press said, will be held in the premier's office with C. H. Millard, president of the local auto union; J. L. Cohen, attorney for the strikers; Harry J. Carmichael, vice president and general manager of General Motors of Canada, Ltd., and J. B. Highfield, Oshawa plant manager, attending.

Conditions Accepted.

Martin and the union executive board, meeting in offices of the United Mine Workers, kept in close touch by telephone with the developments in Oshawa. Cohen conferred with him on the premier's demands regarding elimination of C. I. O. instructions and representation, and then refused to comply with the demands. After further discussion in the premier's office, however, Cohen and Millard agreed to the conditions, rather than block any immediate peace meeting. General Motors officials earlier had refused to attend the conference unless it was held in the premier's office.

The agreement was interpreted here as by no means barring the C. I. O. union from the Oshawa plants, unless the premier is able to force such a stipulation into whatever contract might be arrived at.

Martin yesterday took issue with Premier Hepburn on the latter's statements that delegations of strikers had told him many of the 3,700 strikers wanted to return to work under the higher wages offered. "We are informed authentically," Martin said, "that the auto workers are squarely behind their negotiating committee. There has been no 'back-to-work' movement and the workers are holding their lines solidly."

Union Grateful to C. I. O.

Discussing the board's resolution of support for the C. I. O., he said the union was grateful for the help given it by the Lewis organization, that it now was able to stand by itself, being an international union "with 300,000 members," and was in a position to help the C. I. O. organize other mass production industries.

Martin said that of every dollar contributed in dues by members, either in Canada or this country,

Day's Developments On the Labor Front

General Motors strikers in Canada agreed to enter peace negotiations under conditions interpreted as repudiation of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

Eight companies of Maine National Guardsmen were ordered into the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike zone after renewed rioting.

An early end of the strike of 240 District tailors and their helpers was predicted after strikers' representatives and a committee of merchants reached an agreement.—Page 4.

Abandonment of the International Harvester Co.'s employe representative system, or company union, was announced in letters to 35,000 employes—Page 4.

Maine Troops Called in C. I. O. Strike Rioting

Governor Charges 'Anarchy' as Police Use Tear Gas on Crowd.

By the Associated Press.

Lewiston, Me., April 21.—Violence for the second consecutive day in the Lewiston-Auburn general shoe strike brought quick orders from Gov. Lewis O. Barrows tonight for mobilization of troops.

Eight companies of Maine National Guardsmen received commands to move into the two cities where State troopers and police battled in two separate engagements late today with massed strikers.

City Manager Frederick W. Ford, of Auburn, said a request for troops was transmitted to Gov. Barrows after a squadron of officers flung back attempts of 1,000 strikers and sympathizers to march on shoe factories in Auburn. The officers then used tear gas and clubs to disperse another large crowd which milled around two plants.

Officer Is Injured.

Several participants, including State Police Lieut. George Fowler, were injured in the Stone-flinging, club-wielding melees before police gained control of the situation.

Ford said martial law would not be declared unless conditions became worse.

In a prepared statement, Gov. Barrows declared he was ready to "order out the entire military forces of Maine to preserve constitutional authority."

"When there is open defiance to the orders of our court and our officers of the law, there is little difference from anarchy. We shall not tolerate this situation for a moment," he said.

At the scene of the tear-gas barrage, Powers Hapgood, New England secretary of the Committee for Industrial Organization, termed the police action "outrageous."

"If the police had allowed the strikers to march peaceably by the factories, this thing never would have happened," he said.

Supreme Court Justice Harry Manser ruled yesterday the strike was illegal, and enjoined further activity in its behalf by the United Shoe Workers of America, affiliate of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, which called the strike March 24.

Before strikers swarmed from a mass meeting in Lewiston's city hall to march on Auburn factories, union organizers braved contempt of court charges by urging workers to "stay with us."

John D. Nolan, secretary of the U. S. W., referred to the Supreme Court injunction as a "miscarriage of justice," and declared he and other organizers would "take their places on the platform until removed by force."

Returns from Capital.

"The injunction means nothing," he said. "If that be treason, I am here to take the consequences."

Earlier Hapgood returned to Maine after a Washington conference with Lewis.

"We're going to maintain the strike," he asserted.

Mine Witness Is Threatened With Death

Asserts to Committee He Was 'Shoved Around' in Washroom.

By Sidney Olson.

A drawling young mountain man told the shocked Senate Civil Liberties Committee last night he had been threatened with death unless he "took the 6 o'clock train out of here."

Lawrence Howard, of "bloody Harlan" County, shambled to the witness-chair to testify an unknown voice told him on the telephone, "Your train leaves at 6 o'clock."

Howard said he answered, "I didn't know I owned a train."

He said the voice continued, "Get in touch with Jim Allen. If you don't you'll be buried in Arlington Cemetery here, or back home in Resthaven Cemetery in Harlan."

Allen is a field representative of the United Mine Workers. Committee investigators believed this was an attempt by anti-union men of Harlan to discredit Allen.

Tells of "Shoving Around."

Howard also testified four men had "shoved me around," in the wash-room, after he left the witness stand last week, where he had testified certain deputy sheriffs of Harlan had offered him $150 to shoot into the home of William Clontz, a union organizer. He said then he had refused the offer.

The attack was made the next night, with bullets narrowly missing Clontz's wife and son, and Howard told the committee then that a car sped past his house shortly after the burst of gunfire, hit a dog in the road and stopped while three deputies, whom he named, got out and "tossed the dog in the yard."

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., chairman of the committee, told Howard from the stand: "The Capitol of this Nation is not Harlan County, Kentucky. The witnesses of this committee will be protected from all intimidation."

Identification Fails.

He then directed Howard to stand at the hearing-room door while the session was adjourned, and to identify, if possible, any of the four men who had pushed him to the wall in the washroom.

Howard gazed blankly at the serious faces of the spectators as they filed out singly, but could not recognize anyone as a member of the group.

From the stand he had named a Harlan deputy, Wash Irwin, as having called after him as he left the room the other day, prior to the attack, "So you've turned red-neck on us, hey?" "Red-neck," Howard explained later, is the Harlan term for members of the United Mine Workers of America, whose organization efforts have been thwarted in Harlan for many years by activities of the coal operators, according to testimony.

Thought Threat "Joke."

Irwin was not one of the four who threatened him in the washroom, which is a few feet down the corridor from the hearing-room, Howard said.

He told La Follette he had at first accepted the telephone threat as a "joke," but when he found from questioning his friends that none of them had made the call, he informed the committee.

William Turnblazer, regional representative of the United Mine Workers, told reporters yesterday he had sent 16 organizers into Harlan County, with others to go in as fast as they could get there. With them they carried reports of the exposure of coal operators' activities before the committee, and an explanation of the Wagner Labor Relations act, guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining. One mine operator has testified he had never heard of the Wagner act until his lawyer told him of it on his arrival in Washington the other day to testify.

Meanwhile Ted Creech, 35-year-old mine superintendent, was held for grand jury action in Police Court yesterday by Judge John P. McMahon on a charge of perjury before the Civil Liberties Committee, after he denied he had threatened a witness, despite the testimony of the witness and a United States marshal that he had made the threat.

The alleged threat on Howard's life brought into sharp focus the tensity of the atmosphere at the hearings, where, but a few seats

John Hamilton Sued by Wife For Support

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., April 21.—Mrs. Laura Hamilton filed suit in district court today for separate maintenance from John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Mrs. Hamilton asked custody of their two children, Daniel, 20, and Laura, 12. The suit charged "gross neglect of duty, abandonment and extreme cruelty."

Mrs. Hamilton has maintained her residence here, while her husband has resided in Washington, headquarters of the committee.

They were married January 28, 1915.

Hamilton, 45-year-old attorney, became chairman of the Republican National Committee in June, 1936, after the Cleveland convention which nominated Alf M. Landon, then Governor of Kansas, for President. He directed Landon's unsuccessful campaign.

A native of Fort Madison, Iowa, Hamilton has had a distinguished career in Kansas as a lawyer, speaker of the State House of Representatives and political leader.

In Washington he said he was "not prepared to make any statement" on the suit.

The purpose of the action, attorneys for Mrs. Hamilton said, is to have the court fix an amount which Hamilton would be required to pay for the family's maintenance, although her petition does not allege he has not provided maintenance in the past.

Mrs. Hamilton's suit asserted her husband "is the owner of considerable property and receives a salary of $25,000 a year." She did not specify the amount of separate maintenance sought.

Hamilton visited his family here last January when he came to Topeka to attend the Kansas Day ceremonies.

Denhardt Denied Trial Continuance

New Castle, Ky., April 21 (AP).—In the same courtroom where 14 years ago he made the opening speech of his successful campaign for the office of Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, portly Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt went on trial today on a charge of murdering his fiancee, lovely Verna Garr Taylor.

Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall opened proceedings by denying a defense motion for a continuance until the September term of court. Yesterday the defense lost in its effort to secure a change of venue.

When court adjourned late today ten jurors had been seated tentatively. With the first panel of 24 veniremen exhausted, Judge Marshall instructed Sheriff Evan Harrod to bring in 100 more prospective jurors tomorrow.

Rebel Shells Rake Madrid; City Crumbles

Cannonade in 10th Day in Attempt to Relieve Trapped Fascists.

By John Lloyd,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

Madrid, April 21.—Insurgent shells, pounding for hours today in the fiercest bombardment in the half-year siege of Madrid, caused the havoc today that the world's capitals dread in modern war.

The heart of this metropolis of 1,000,000 inhabitants, it seemed, was being hammered into dust by the rain of explosives. The barrage started before dawn and lasted throughout the daylight hours. Fully 250 shells found targets.

It was the tenth successive day, and the heaviest, of the insurgent shelling. It raised the total of the known fatalities for the ten days to approximately 200, with at least twice that number wounded. Thirty-two persons were known to have been killed this morning alone.

As this dispatch was written, the Gran Via, the "Broadway" of Madrid, literally had become a major war front. Deafening explosions, followed by the crash of falling debris, came steadily.

Anti-Aircraft Fire.

Insurgent batteries raked the city with anti-aircraft shells, interspersed with the heavy explosives of large cannon. Widespread sections were affected.

Looking outside the door while filing his dispatch, this correspondent saw a shell strike a streetcar which was clattering for safety behind a row of buildings. The car stopped and 15 wounded passengers were helped from it. One woman was carried out with her legs splintered.

Uninjured passengers jumped and ran for shelter in a subway entrance. The city's activities were halted as persons caught downtown thronged the subway tunnels and building basements to escape the spray of shrapnel. They waited for hours, fearful of venturing home.

Shells fell at intervals of two and three minutes—sometimes, when three anti-aircraft batteries appeared to be blazing in unison—at 30-second intervals.

Autos Commandeered.

Militiamen with drawn pistols halted automobiles, some of them speeding away from the most exposed areas, and commandeered them for ambulances.

In the telephone building, where the Associated Press staff worked throughout the bombardment, doctors and nurses worked feverishly in an improvised first-aid station in the basement. Militiamen and passersby streamed in with wounded, some on stretchers and others laid out on men's coats. Three of 15 patients died within a half hour.

Government officials ascribed the fierce bombardment to an attempt by insurgents to force the defense army to release its stranglehold on University City, the devastated model education center in Madrid's northwest. Efforts of insurgents to relieve a crack garrison of 3,000 men, isolated there supposedly with dwindling supplies of food and water, have failed.

Throughout the day explosions dug deep holes in the sidewalks of the capital and swept like wind through doors where the glass had been blown out. Each time, people fell injured and others dragged them to the subway entrances or to first-aid stations.

Leftists Drive on Teruel.

With Government Troops on the Front at Celadas, Spain, April 21 (AP). Heavy artillery and air bombing squadrons joined Spanish government troops today in a big push to smash an insurgent army at Teruel and remove a long-standing threat to Valencia on the east coast.

The government soldiers, capturing this town, strengthened their power with large supplies of munitions abandoned by retreating insurgents.

Bilbao Fighting Renewed.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, April 21 (AP).—The Basque government and Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgents both claimed victory today in fresh fighting through the Basque hills rising southeast of Bilbao, the beleaguered Biscayan capital.

Vallee Convicted In Boston Assault On a Camerman

Boston, April 21 (AP).—A "packed house"—male fans predominating—today heard Rudy Vallee convicted of assault and battery on a Boston newspaperman.

Judge Daniel J. Gillen ordered the case placed "on file," explaining it would mean the crooner would have no record in the eyes of police.

The orchestra leader shouted once from the witness stand. That was when he denied he had called Benedict Fitzgerald, news photographer, a name "reflecting on the Irish race."

Fitzgerald had haled Vallee into court, claiming the crooner struck him after he had "snapped" the orchestra leader, a companion, and Evelyn Gresham, New York show girl, as the trio left a Boston theater.

Harry Paul, theatrical agent, who was with Vallee when the scuffle occurred, was fined $50 on a charge of assault and battery on Fitzgerald.

Roosevelt's Economy Plea Brushed Aside In First House Test

D. A. R. Urge Ballot on Court, Assails Jefferson Shrine Site

Adopts Resolution Requesting Congress to Submit Issue to People; Seeks to Preserve Cherry Trees; Will Vote Today.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

While State regents' reports and nominations for eight offices were features of last night's program for the Daughters of the American Revolution, the chief behind-the-scenes topic of conversation among delegates was the list of resolutions they adopted yesterday.

Four of these were in opposition to recent legislative proposals. The fifth was offered as a substitute for the "teacher's oath" resolution usually adopted by the body.

With "ayes" resounding to the rafters of Constitution Hall, the forty-sixth continental congress went on record at its morning meeting as opposing:

The President's Supreme Court reorganization plan, on the ground that any such change should be submitted to the people in the form of a proposed constitutional amendment.

The proposal before Congress to replace the present front of the Capitol with a new front and move the building forward a number of feet.

The location of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in any position imperiling the safety of the cherry trees.

The Nye-Kvale bill, which would require Reserve officers' training in land grant colleges and universities to be elective and not compulsory.

The fifth resolution urged that all persons accepting positions of public trust be required to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution.

Delegates last night still were talking about their resolutions—the first one particularly—as they clustered together in little groups in the hall and in the aisles of the auditorium during the recess between the reading of two groups of regents'

Boylan Defends Memorial Site And Architect

Taking the defensive in a controversy which is roaring to a climax, Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, yesterday assailed critics of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission and told why the Pope design and the Tidal Basin site were selected.

It was the first time he had upheld the decisions of the commission, of which he is chairman, on the House floor.

Boylan's speech, delivered with Architect John Russell Pope seated in the gallery, came simultaneously with formal disapproval of the Tidal Basin site by the D. A. R. and an announcement by Thomas Ellis Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, that he will ask the House Appropriations Committee today for a hearing in which to present the federation's objections to the location.

The appropriations committee is now conducting hearings on the second deficiency bill, for which President Roosevelt and the Budget Bureau have recommended a $500,000 item to permit construction of the memorial at the Tidal Basin to be started at once.

Cites L'Enfant Plan.

Declaring "it's time for a showdown in this battle of the cherry blossoms," Boylan reiterated his argument that placing of the huge marble monument south of Washington Monument will complete the five-cardinal-point principle of the L'Enfant plan.

Earlier this week Francis P. Sullivan, chairman of the Committee on the National Capital of the American Institute of Architects, asserted "the L'Enfant plan does not contemplate any structure at this point and L'Enfant himself repeatedly stated his purpose of leaving the view of the river from the White House unobstructed."

Boylan pointed out that his commission was created by Congress with full powers, that the President approved both the design and the location and that execution of present plans would increase the number of Japanese cherry trees, rather than destroy those now in the soil.

"The opposition," he charged, "originated with a group of architects on Uncle Sam's pay roll, for the most part engaged on relief agency jobs."

This allusion, it is believed, was to the League for Progress in Ar-

Jury, Out 24 Hours, Again Deadlocks in Case of Loan Co. Chief.

The second jury to try Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, on a charge of forging the name of Desire A. Irr to a withdrawal slip for $1,500 was dismissed by Justice Peyton Gordon late yesterday after a hopeless deadlock was reported.

The jury had been given the case late Tuesday afternoon and when it was reported more than 24 hours later that the members were still unable to agree, the mistrial was declared.

Rhodes was charged with forging the name of Irr, an engraver in the Government Printing Office, to the withdrawal slip. He admitted he wrote Irr's name on the slip, but he claimed he had been authorized to draw on Irr's account whenever it was necessary to help the association.

Late Tuesday the jurors requested Justice Peyton Gordon to give them further instructions on what constituted the elements of forgery. After being given those instructions they were ordered locked up for the night, with directions to resume their deliberations yesterday. When the jurors reported at about 4.50 p. m. they were in hopeless disagreement and they were ordered dismissed.

Faces Other Charges.

In addition to the forgery charge, Rhodes, who was defended by Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., is charged with 20 larceny and 7 forgery accusations. John J. Wilson, assistant district attorney, who has been in charge of both prosecutions of Rhodes, stated last night he would present the same charge to another jury next month.

In his first trial Rhodes was given a mistrial when the jury failed to agree after more than 24 hours of deliberation. During the time the jury was out he appeared confident he would be acquitted.

$1,000,000-a-Year Bill for Water Pollution Bureau Approved.

2 New Measures Ask Relief Boost

G.O.P. Seeks Percentage Slash in New Federal Appropriations.

The Economy Plan.

Despite President Roosevelt's requests for economy, the House passed a bill setting up a bureau of water pollution control and authorizing almost unrestricted loans and grants to the States.

Secretary Wallace indicated abandonment of the major Administration proposals for farm legislation at this session of Congress as a result of the economy campaign.—Page 2.

House Republicans revealed plans to seek flat 10 per cent cuts in all appropriation bills.

The House labor committee fixed at 300,000 the Civilian Conservation Corps personnel, as the President recommended and refused requests that it be increased to 350,000.

House Revolts.

By Robert C. Albright.

Put to the first retrenchment test since the President's budget message, the House yesterday rode roughshod over spending cautions, as economy dueled with projected new outlays over a vast Capitol front.

The President's requests for sharp pruning were ignored by the House in a trial showdown. By a vote of 187 to 121, members approved a bill setting up a new bureau of water pollution control in the Public Health Bureau, with $1,000,000 annually for expenditures and investigations, and virtually unrestricted Treasury sanitation grants and loans to the States.

As leaders mapped a widespread retrenchment program aimed at scaling down relief and sidetracking costly spending proposals, Republicans moved for flat percentage cuts in all future appropriations. Offsetting both efforts, two blocs of so-called "liberals" and progressive Democrats organized in the House to bolster 1938 relief appropriations to $3,000,000,000 and $2,250,000,000 respectively.

The Republican bid for flat percentage cuts in appropriation bills was inaugurated by Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee.

Woodrum Hits Plan.

It was learned that Taber moved for a 10 per cent cut in the Agriculture appropriation bill, at a saving, he estimated, at $90,000,000, but was voted down by the committee. Taber will make the same proposal in the House later this week, on a motion to recommit the Agriculture bill and effect the saving.

The New York Representative said similar motions, for various rates of percentage reductions, will be offered by the minority on every succeeding appropriation bill.

"We are going to find out whether they intend to stand by the economy part of the President's budget message," said Taber.

While favoring sharp cuts in spending, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who served as acting Appropriations chairman during recent illness of Chairman Edward T. Taylor, declared flat percentage reduction is "not the intelligent way to cut."

Meanwhile, a prominent House Democratic leader said there was "talk" of proposing a 10 per cent slash in all appropriations after all of the regular supply bills have been passed. The plan, which is still in the discussion stage, would be offered in a joint resolution near the close of the session, he said.

Second Economy Plan.

Another novel method of keeping spending within revenue limitations was put forward by Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the House Expenditures and Reorganization Committees.

Cochran said he has suggested that all bills reported by House committees involving unauthorized appropriations carry a separate section, providing means of meeting the cost by taxation or other form of reimbursement. This section would then go to the House Ways

This lent color to reports he is considering an African honeymoon after his marriage to Mrs. Simpson.

Widespread Sabotage Told.

Moscow, April 21 (AP).—The vast extent of wrecking activities in Russian industry was disclosed to the nation today by Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the Council of People's Commissars.

Though admitting all the facts were not known yet, he said "we already know enough to say that serious injury has been inflicted on our national economy, and on heavy industry in particular by Trotzkyists and other agents."

"It is necessary that all roots of this criminal gang be completely exterminated as soon as possible," he said. "One must bear in mind that all the criminal activities were only preparatory to more serious and more dangerous blows to be inflicted upon the country in the future with the beginning of war."

London, April 21 (AP).—Chancellor Neville Chamberlain's "prosperity profits tax" to bolster the 1937-38 fiscal budget appeared headed for a hard fight tonight with growing disaffection in Commons and a split threatened in Conservative ranks.

Lawyer Hints Harlem 'Messiah' Has Fled to Branch 'Heaven'

Madison declared the man he calls "God" had nothing to do with the fracas that began when a process server attempted to hand him a summons in a civil action in front of a crowd of his followers.

Farm Program To Be Ditched, Wallace Hints

'If We Lack the Money, All Must Go Overboard,' Secretary Says.

By Russell Smith.

Ditching of the Administration farm program for this session of Congress, dictated by retrenchment necessities, is in prospect.

Long range proposals for improvement of the agriculturist's lot will be postponed at least until the next session, it was made clear during Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's press conference yesterday.

The Secretary did not say positively farm tenancy, crop insurance and ever-normal granary proposals will be dropped, but said:

"If we have not the money to spend, we will simply have to throw everything overboard for the time being."

Own Faith Made Clear.

He made clear his own belief that all of these measures are desirable and distinguished between immediate and long-time operations. Through all his remarks ran the implication that the Administration will abandon positive efforts for new farm legislation save on a shoe-string, experimental basis.

Wallace's statements left the way open for approval by Congress of any of these measures if it wishes to accept financial responsibility for them.

While speaking in solemn terms of the grand-scale program of November, Wallace at the same time was deploring the farmer's plight in an economy where he receives but 11 per cent of the national income as against his pre-war share of 13 to 14 per cent.

Typical of the Secretary's discussion of farm legislation was his statement on tenancy action. He said that a $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 appropriation for land purchase probably is desirable, so that a start may be made toward solution of the tenant problem.

"A Fraction of a Drop."

"That will be only a fraction of a drop in the bucket," he added. "Even the $50,000,000 (originally proposed in Congress for that purpose) would be only a fraction of a drop in the bucket.

"But you must distinguish between immediate matters and those which can wait. Take soil conservation and farm tenancy. There isn't one person in a thousand who realizes the gravity of these problems. They can't be solved all at once. We have made a start on some of them in the last three years, and if we can go ahead it will be an extraordinarily fine thing.

"Sooner or later we have got to do something permanent about them, though, for we must realize they (soil erosion and the tenancy problem) are a threat to our civilization."

Since it was made clear that rehabilitation loans and retirement of sub-marginal land, to some extent, can be taken care of in a $75,000,000 Resettlement Administration authorization, it appeared tenancy legislation is doomed.

This view received substantiation in informal remarks of leaders on Capitol Hill, where a $470,000,000 bill is on the calendar of the House and an as yet incomplete bill is in Senate committee.

Crop Surety in '38 His Hope.

Of the two remaining agricultural props the Administration has favored in the past, Wallace said he hopes "the granary will be given the most serious consideration" and that "crop insurance will begin with the 1938 crop year."

Nevertheless, he agreed that elimination of both "would have no great effect this year" on farmers' status. The granary proposals have never been submitted to Congress. They have awaited recommendations from a committee representing organized farm groups, which, after months of deliberation, has failed to unite upon its suggestions.

A $100,000,000 crop insurance bill was passed by the Senate last month with surprising speed. Since that time it has been in the House Agriculture Committee, virtually untouched.

"As long as the farmer's share of the national income is less than it was before the (World) war," Wallace nevertheless repeated, "he is not getting economic justice."

Fascists Try to Involve Mme. Lupescu in Trial

Bucharest, Rumania, April 21 (AP).—A military court today blocked a determined effort to involve Mme. Magda Lupescu, friend of King Carol, in the trial of ten members of the Fascist "Iron Guard" for the slaying last July of Mihail Stelescu.

Repeated maneuvers of counsel for the men to bring Mme. Lupescu before the court for questioning on Guardist charges that she influenced the King and the conduct of state affairs were thwarted by the military court.

President's Sincerity at Stake Now in His Promises of Balanced Budget.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN view of his previous unfulfilled promises regarding a balanced budget and governmental economies, President Roosevelt can hardly complain if his latest message to Congress on that subject is regarded with cynical skepticism. Those in the habit of making glib promises—like the boy who cried "wolf" too often—cannot expect to be regarded forever as serious and sincere.

WALTMAN.

Thus the President's promise that he would use every means at his command to bring about a balanced budget in the next fiscal year, even though his message left much to be desired, stands as a challenge to him. Unless he fulfills this latest promise, how can the American people have faith in the word of their President?

On previous occasions Mr. Roosevelt has been able to find an alibi for his failure to fulfill his promise of a balanced budget. Either the industrialists had not done their part in reducing unemployment, or the Supreme Court had invalidated the AAA or the Congress had thwarted the effort by voting immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus.

But now the President has come to the end of his alibis—unless he is willing to claim that a necessary for increased armament excuses an unbalanced budget. The present failure for the estimated difference between the income and the disbursements of the Treasury is a failure of revenue to meet the President's rosy, optimistic expectations. Thus the lesson is fairly clear that there is a ceiling to the revenue which can be realized by the present tax rates and that Mr. Roosevelt must face the disagreeable business either of imposing additional taxes or reducing expenditures.

Except for general declarations in favor of economy, albeit they were more sharply worded than previously, Mr. Roosevelt in his message to Congress refuses to face either of these inevitable alternatives. He spoke of the need for economy, but he did not even suggest where he proposed to do any cutting. He indicated that his desire was to prevent Congress from going on a spending spree but was vague about restraining the spending which he has initiated.

Indeed, the President overruled his leaders in Congress who wished the relief appropriation held down to $1,000,000,000 instead of the $1,500,000,000 he recommended. There is not a word of justification or defense in his message as to why such a sum is needed for the fifth year of recovery. Nor did any indication come from Mr. Roosevelt that a real effort is being made to curtail relief expenditures or whether a similar sum will not be necessary for the following fiscal year.

On the side of further taxation, Mr. Roosevelt postponed resort to that alternative for at least a year by announcing a survey by the Treasury of the Federal tax structure. In the meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt proposes to try to get by by liquidating and using up so-called recoverable assets of the emergency lending agencies—assets which properly should not be dissipated in current spending but should be used to reduce the national debt.

Thus the President's message was at once surprising and disappointing. It is surprising not because he spoke out in so firm a tone in behalf of economy but because in view of all that has happened in recent months he was not more determined about retrenchment. Although most of the President's most trusted advisers have seen the fiscal danger signals flying for several months, he apparently is not impressed by them and pursues a course of dilly-dallying with a situation which requires a firm and determined hand. His message is disappointing because the President fails to face up to the facts.

What are these facts? One is that the Federal Government, in a period of comparative prosperity, with annual revenue estimated at the all-time peak of $6,906,000,000, cannot live within that income but must borrow.

Another is that the prices of Government securities dropped during the month of March, even though the Treasury—using borrowed money, mind you, purchased in the open market $119,000,000 of its own securities, and the Federal Reserve System, at a time when there is a great volume of idle money, has undertaken an open market policy of purchasing sizable amounts of Government securities—obviously for the purpose of supporting the market for those securities.

Still another fact is that the country faces a rapidly rising price level which in part has been stimulated by Government spending and will continue to be stimulated as long as the Treasury pours large sums into the stream of purchasing power.

And still another important fact is that the country, remaining ignorant of the danger involved in this situation, remains complacent as Governors and Mayors seek to keep the Federal Treasury burdened with their relief problems and other pressure groups undertake to shift more of the local load to the back of the Washington government. The latest in that respect is the effort of Senator Pat Harrison to get the Federal Government to take over—by easy stages—the cost of education.

Instead of working out an orderly program for handling the relief problem, of eliminating Federal financial responsibility in that and other fields and then undertaking to impose taxes to cover the cost of what he thinks the Federal Government should do, Mr. Roosevelt has adopted the British trait of trying to muddle through.

The British apparently have abandoned such indecisive policies. In contrast to the Roosevelt message was that of Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, on the same day. There was no "muddling through" in the latter. It constituted a firm and determined policy to meet the desperate situation in which the British find themselves on the world front. It called on the British people to tighten their belts and pay as they go for averting the danger which their leaders believe threaten them.

The British appear to know where they are going and are ready realistically to face up to the consequences. Can the same be said about us?

and Means committee for approval. Cochran said it would make necessary a change in the rules of the House.

It was Cochran yesterday who moved to head off appropriations involved in the House pollution-control bill. Instead of authorizing a new agency, with broad provisions for grants and loans to the States, the Missourian proposed investigations be conducted by the Chief of Army Engineers and the Surgeon General on improving condition of streams and rivers. They would report their findings to Congress in January, 1939.

Small Economy Success.

This amendment by Cochran was voted down on a roll-call ballot, 188 to 157. Voting against it were 169 Democrats, including the majority leader, 10 Republicans, 6 Farmer-Laborites and 3 Progressives.

A minor economy success was reported for the Administration in the House Labor Committee, considering the President's proposal to trim strength of the Civilian Conservation Corps to 300,000. Despite demands of the House CCC block that strength be maintained at 350,000, the committee fixed the limit at 300,000. Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, a leader of the CCC bloc, will carry the fight to the House floor.

Although House and Senate leaders expressed hope of trimming the President's $1,500,000,000 relief estimate to $1,200,000,000 or even $1,000,000,000, two movements to double the figure were organizing in the House yesterday.

Following a meeting of one group of Democrats, held in the office of Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, Representative H. Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), California, offered a bill for $2,250,000,000 for work relief and an unemployment survey beginning July 1.

Soil conservation, flood control, drought prevention, water conservation, prevention of stream pollution, slum clearance, power development, processing of foods and school construction were enumerated among 15 "suitable and proper" public works undertakings in the Voorhis bill. Employment of 3,000,000 persons at a wage of not less than 30 cents an hour was declared the "aim and policy" of the program.

$3,000,000,000 Sought.

A second campaign to increase the relief fund to $3,000,000,000 already was under way. It had the support of a bloc of House Progressives led by Representative Gerald J. Boileu, of Wisconsin.

Conferring throughout the day, leaders in both Houses claimed gains in support for holding the relief appropriation within the $1,500,000,000 proposed by the President. A strong effort will be made for the Senate to hold it to $1,000,000,000.

Leaders said an effort will be made to sidetrack all programs for which the President has not submitted estimates. The first test of their rule will come on the Harrison-Black bill to provide $1,000,000,000 in five years for Federal education subsidies to the States. Although Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, may whittle the first year's appropriation to $25,000,000, the Administration leadership claims votes to defeat it.

The pending Wagner housing bill, if approved at all, would be financed out of existing PWA funds, while only those activities now authorized would be salvaged from the farm tenancy bill, under leadership plans.

Representative Woodrum, whose Appropriations sub-committee will handle the new tariff estimates, said hearings may open next week. He pointed out that the House committee already has trimmed $65,000,000 below estimates on regular supply bills reported, and said there would be more incisive cutting on bills to follow.

"If we can hold down public expenditures so they will not increase on us," said Woodrum, "if we can liquidate these emergency organizations that should be liquidated, now that the emergency has passed, cut down the employed personnel of the Government and let them be absorbed by industry, hold down the expenditures and watch the constant effort to embark on new undertakings, then with the natural increases that will come to us from tax measures already on the books, I believe our budget will come reasonably into balance."

Representative Taber in a radio speech last night said six measures before Congress totaling $3,551,000,000 have implied Administration support, and members have introduced bills that would aggregate $190,000,000,000. If Congress is held in session until September, he predicted authorizations may go $1,225,000,000 over the President's budget.

"Let us have the courage to do the thing we ought to do and stop the program of destruction before it is too late," said Taber. "The alternative is uncontrolled and unbridled inflation."

In an appeal for economy and a sarcastic attack on the river pollution bill in the House yesterday, Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said he "would like to have this great Santa Claus of a Federal Government send down 5,000 bureaucrats with a lot of theories and no practical sense" to fight the mosquitoes, gnats and flies in his Congressional district. He said there were "10,000 worthy objectives" in every Congressional district for "this bunch of wild-eyed reformers."

Destroyers to Escort Roosevelt's Yacht From New Orleans Through Gulf; Special Train May Start Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy set to work yesterday to complete arrangements for President Roosevelt's spring fishing cruise on the Gulf of Mexico.

Two or there destroyers will act as escort for the U. S. S. Potomac, which the President will board at New Orleans April 29 for a week's angling for tarpon with his son, Elliott, and a small group of aides. He will be away from Washington about two weeks.

Two Navy seaplanes will be based at Galveston to carry official mail to and from the Potomac at sea, while a skeleton White House staff at Galveston will keep contact with the vacation vessel by radio.

The Potomac is now en route to New Orleans. Tentative plans call for the new destroyer Moffett, en route Southward from Norfolk, and the destroyer Schenck, now at New Orleans, to serve as escort ships to guard the Potomac and relay official messages between it and shore.

The destroyer Decatur, which has been training reservists at Norfolk, also may be used.

A tentative itinerary announced yesterday calls for departure from Washington by special train late Tuesday night. The first stop will be at Biloxi, Miss., on the Gulf Coast.

There the Presidential party will detrain and motor to New Orleans by way of the old home of Jefferson Davis, near Gulfport. The house is now used as a veterans' home.

The party will arrive in New Orleans in time for luncheon April 29. The President may go for an automobile ride before boarding the Potomac. For a day or two White House headquarters will be located at New Orleans and then will be transferred to Galveston. The headquarters will be in charge of Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre.

The President will cruise along the Texas coast, probably between 100 and 200 miles from shore. He is expected to land at Galveston and to visit his son Elliott's home at Fort Worth on the way back to Washington.

He also has under consideration invitations to visit the San Jacinto, Tex., battlefield where Texas won her independence from Mexico 101 years ago yesterday, and to review the cadets at Texas A. and M. College.

Kansas City, Kans., April 21 (AP).—The Kansas State Board of Review rescinded today its order last week deleting from a news film (March of Time) remarks of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, (Democrat), Montana in a dialogue concerning President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan.

Through her secretary, Miss Mae Clausen, board chairman, announced the board's action in a message to Gov. Walter A. Huxman. A statement said the board was "sincerely sorry if our first decision has caused embarrassment to anyone."

word tonight that officers and crew of the Dutch steamer Andra were safe. The Andra was captured two weeks ago by Spanish insurgents.

The Netherlands legation at Lisbon informed the foreign office here that the crew had been liberated by insurgent captors at Salamanca and that reports officers of the ship had been executed were without foundation. An unconfirmed newspaper dispatch to an Amsterdam newspaper had reported, under St. Jean de Luz, France, date, that the officers and three members of a Spanish government commission aboard the ship were shot after trial by court-martial.

Six Ships to Run Blockade.

St. Jean De Luz, France, April 21 (AP).—Six British freighters, loaded with food supplies, massed tonight for what diplomats called a dash for Bilbao "under the benevolent watch" of British warships.

While the British warships declined actually to convoy the freighters through the insurgent blockade, acting on instructions from the British admiralty, it was said warships would stay within a few miles of the cargo vessels and see that they are not molested outside the 3-mile limit.

The freighters' captains, diplomats declared, were willing to wait outside Spanish waters, protected by the navy, until they could see a chance to slip into Bilbao. This was reported to be made easier by the unwillingness of insurgent ships to come too close to the Basque coast for fear of government land batteries.

New Hall of Nations Scholarship Here Goes to Jan Dazant

Award of the Hall of Nations fellowship carrying a year of graduate study at American University to a student at the Masaryk University at Brno, Czechoslovakia, Jan Dazant, was announced last night in New York by Prof. Ellery Stowell, director of the Hall of Nations.

It was the first award to be made by the Hall, an organization recently formed for promotion of international understanding among university students.

Czechoslovakia was selected as the country to receive the fellowship at a ball held in Washington last month to raise funds to pay Dazant's tuition and board. The name of the tiny Balkan state was drawn by Henry L. Stimson, secretary of State in the Hoover Administration, during the ball, which was sponsored by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Hall of Nations chairman.

Dazant was recommended by Dr. Stephen Douglas, director of the Institute of International Education. He will come to American University next September for a year's study of economics and of the activities of the Federal Government in this field, Prof. Stowell said.

Gable Hides From Fair Fans At Paternity Extortion Trial

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 21.—Behind locked doors in the Federal building, handsome Clark Gable shut himself off today from the court-going public that flocked to the extortion trial of a woman who charged he is the father of her 13-year-old daughter.

An excited crowd of women—smaller than the hundreds who greeted his courtroom debut yesterday—waited in vain for the screen lover to appear today at the trial of Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, buxom British woman charged with mail fraud conspiracy by attempting to link Gable with her admittedly illicit romance.

Defense attorneys claim she honestly mistook Gable for a "Frank Billings," the father of her daughter, Gwendoline.

Yesterday the screen hero took the stand as a prosecution witness and said "no" when lawyers asked him if he was a father, if he knew Mrs. Norton and if he had ever been in England where her romance took place.

But defense attorneys asked him to come back today.

So the actor returned. But he did not attend the session. He sat in an attorney's outer office reading law books. Nor did he leave for luncheon. Sandwiches and a bottle of milk were brought in to him.

Two more of Mrs. Norton's many letters were introduced. A prolific writer, witnesses said she composed 20 letters to Gable and numerous others to movie magazines and movie commentators.

One of those read today was addressed to Mae West. In the letter Mrs. Norton told blonde Miss West that she knew the actress had no husband, but felt sure she "would understand the problems of a deserted wife and mother."

It related the story of her relations with the man she knew as Frank Billings and believed to be Clark Gable.

It said she was living with James Norton in Essex, England, in 1922. Billings lived on an adjoining farm. One night he hid under the Norton house, heard a domestic quarrel and discovered that they were not married.

Then the letter said, Billings locked Mrs. Norton in his cottage and there their illicit romance began. Not until 1925, the letter stated, did she marry Norton.

"She is his love child, all right," the letter to Miss West said, referring to Mrs. Norton's daughter.

"What a shame it would put Clark Gable to, to know that Mae West gave his daughter her start in life."

Bombs Damage 5 Chicago Buildings

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—The most widespread eruption of bombing here in recent years was attributed to labor troubles today.

The club and the Smithers home, one of those bombed, are being redecorated. "The bombings were due to union painter trouble, said Sergt. Andrew Aitken, head of the police department's bomb squad.

Meanwhile there were reports of discord between Father Divine and Faithful Mary, the buxom woman who always appeared at his side in public.

Los Angeles, April 21 (AP).—The "Jesus the Christ" of Father Divine's West Coast "Heaven" was indicted today on Mann act charges growing out of a 17-year-old schoolgirl's story of her betrayal.

A Federal grand jury indicted three other persons with Hunt, but neither their names nor the nature of the charges was made public.

Dr. Poulter to Get Geographic Medal

A special gold medal of the National Geographic Society will be presented to Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, senior scientist of the Byrd Antartic Expedition of 1933-1935, in a ceremony here Tuesday in explorer's hall of the society's administration building on Sixtenth street.

The presentation will be made by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, before a group composed of trustees and officers of the organization, ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, scientists and men in official life. On the face of the medal is an inscription, "in recognition of his important explorations and achievements and his technical researches as second in command of the Byrd Antartic Expedition of 1933-1935." The reverse of the medal bears the seal of the society. Dr. Poulter is a noted physicist and chemist and one of the leading authorities in the special field of high pressure researches.

Inspector of Dangerous Mechanisms for U. S. Has Never Had Vacation; No One Else Knows Business.

After 51 years, H. O. Bailey is going to retire.

He has worked those 51 years without a vacation, inspecting Government meters. In a job so dangerous that "you do not know whether you are coming out" when ypu go into one of the great transformers he inspects, he has never missed a day except for two months' illness in 1895.

Now he is going to retire, at 74. He will have $100 a month for the rest of his life, and he won't go into transformers, ever again.

But before he retires he must break in a successor. If he does that, he thinks Congress should make some provision for paying him during that time—something more than his retirement pay.

He told a House Appropriations sub-committee so, and the sub-committee, headed by Representative Dockweiler (Democrat), California, made public the testimony yesterday. The colloquy was as follows.

Has No Assistant.

Mr. Bailey: I took office on June 30, 1886. I have served in that office continually since then, during which time there has been no leave whatever. I have been on duty constantly.

Dr. Dockweiler: You do not have an assistant?

Mr. Bailey. No assistant; no, sir.

Representative Snyder (Republican), Pennsylvania. How many days have you missed in 51 years?

Mr. Bailey. I was sick some time in 1895, for about two months.

Mr. Snyder. And you have never had any vacation?

Mr. Bailey. Never had any; no, sir.

Mr. Snyder. Do you want a vacation?

Dares 13,200 Volts.

Mr. Bailey. Well, I would like to have some.

Mr. Rabaut. What kind of meters do you inspect?

Mr. Bailey. I inspect all gas and electric and steam meters, wherever the Government buys current, steam and gas. It is a very dangerous position. I have to go into these transformers, where there are 6,600 or 13,200 volts, and you do not know whether you are coming out or not. * * * I was going to ask the committee this. I know that somebody has got to instruct the new incumbent, no matter who he is. He could not walk around into those places where these meters are. If I am going to retire, there should be some compensation during the time I instruct the new incumbent. Either that or an additional amount on the retired list. Of course, I do not know how long I am going to live. I will be 74 years old this month.

New Man Might Be Killed.

Mr. Dockweiler. What would be the situation if something happened to you? How would a new man take hold?

Mr. Bailey. He would have an awful time. The chances are he would be killed. You know how dangerous it is to go around something that has 13,200 volts or 6,600 volts. They do not allow anybody in the Capitol power plant at all, and there they have only 6,600 volts.

Mr. Dockweiler. We will consider this matter in executive session.

Mr. Bailey. Thank you, gentlemen.

Maine Troops Called in C.I.O. Strike Rioting

the day for disorders, broke up two small groups of strikers who sought to picket two shoe shops, but otherwise the area remained quiet until the mass parade late today.

The shouting paraders, 1,000 strong, met their first rebuff on a bridge connecting the two cities. Some sifted through police ranks as the general group halted.

Police, seeking to round up the stragglers, met stiffened opposition. Fists and clubs were used before the majority of strikers turned back to Lewiston.

Spectators jammed the sidewalks of streets in both cities leading to the bridge.

Flee Tear Gas Attack.

After the first onslaught was dispelled, police attempted by use of tear gas to disperse another group, estimated at 1,000, milling around the Charles Cushman and B. A. Corbin factories, in Auburn. Both were filled with loyal employes.

Hundreds fled the scene, their eyes smarting from the gas, and stones and clubs again came into play. Police said many in the crowd were spectators, joining strikers living in Auburn and those who had broken through police lines on the bridge.

Troop orders issued from Augusta called out members of companies in Augusta, Belfast, Norway, Rumford, Portland and Lewiston.

Under comand of Col. Spaulding Bisbee, of Portland, commander of the 103d Infantry, the National Guardsmen were expected to be ready for strike duty before morning.

Two Ship Lines Boycotted.

New York, April 21 (AP).—A labor boycott against all Cunard-White Star and Furness-Withy liners was declared tonight by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association. Ryan acted after warning the Cunard line against employing independent longshoremen to load and unload its ships in Montreal.

"As long as these companies insist on using independent labor," Ryan said, "we will tie up all their docks, pending a conference."

The liner Queen Mary was permitted to sail on schedule today under a temporary truce.

Company Unions Abandoned.

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—Abandonment of the International Harvester Co.'s employe representation system, or company union, was announced today by Sydney G. McAllister, president of the company, in letters to 35,000 employes.

The dissolution applied to units of the "Harvester Industrial Council" in the company's 14 plants in the United States.

President McAllister said the action was taken "because the company desires to co-operate with the Government's efforts to eliminate industrial strife and in the belief it is not for the best interests of the employes or the company to continue collective bargaining under a plan which has been subject to criticism, even though the criticism may not be justified."

The letter cited that the National Labor Relations Board last November enjoined the union at the company's Fort Wayne, Ind., plant from negotiating with the company on the ground it did not afford employes full bargaining rights under the Wagner act.

Anti-C. I. O. Union Formed.

Saginaw, Mich., April 21 (AP).—Daniel M. Robins, of Saginaw, who was chairman of a "loyalty committee" during the recent General Motors strikes, announced today the formation of a new union to be known as the American Labor League.

End of Tailors' Strike Here Forecast Today After Agreement Is Reached in Pay Dispute

An end to the 24-hour strike of 240 District tailors and their helpers, members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was forecast today by Edward E. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, after strikers' representatives and a committee of merchants reached a decision late yesterday.

"We expect the men back at their jobs today," Shaw said. "Of course, the decision will have to be ratified by the strikers."

The strike was called yesterday by Local 118 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate. National Organizer Herman Holtznacht said the strike was 95 per cent effective.

The strikers demanded a 40-hour week, union recognition, minimum wages of $36 for tailors and pressers and $22 for their helpers. Vito Fabrizio, of Local 118, said wages now range from $10 a week upward and the average working week is from 48 hours to 54.

Setting up strike headquarters at 808 I street northwest, the strikers paraded down F street during the noon hour yesterday, picketing clothing shops and calling on fellow workers to lay down their tools and join them. Hoots and jeers greeted stores affected by the strike. Police notified leaders they were parading without a permit, in violation of the District law. At the request of authorities the parade broke up and the strikers returned to headquarters.

Assistant Labor Secretary Edward McGrady conversed with some of the leaders on both sides but did not actively intervene. He was reported watching developments.

Labor organizers Holtznecht and F. A. Oswaldo represented the strikers at the conference with the merchants.

An hour after the strike was called ten merchants were willing to sign contracts granting demands.

"We have been negotiating with a committee of the Merchants and Manufacturers without any result," he said. "Our members were clamoring for a strike so today we gave it to them."

No "sit-down" strategy was employed by the strikers. They filed quietly out of the establishments involved when the strike-hour was called.

37½ cents goes to the international union, with 5 cents of the latter sum going into the defense fund.

He expects to confer with Thompson this morning.

From Toronto came word C. I. O. unions were preparing to present demands on steel plants and mine operators, with considerable resistance promised.

Demands Set May 1.

Charles A. McClure, business agent for the steel workers, was quoted by the United Press as saying demands would be presented May 1 at Hamilton, steel center, where 17,000 are employed.

Of expected demands on mine workers, J. P. Bickel, president of the McIntyre Mines, large gold producer, said:

"We will shut down rather than recognize the C. I. O. If my men don't want to work for me, they don't have to. We won't shut down merely to negotiate; we will shut down until the men are ready to go back to work."

Meanwhile, the fight between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor for control of the Georgia Federation of Labor simmered in conferences at Atlanta.

Frank Dillon, who was sent by William Green, A. F. of L. president, to take charge of the Georgia federation after A. Steve Nance, State president, had joined the C. I. O., had a long talk with Nance, while the opening session of the State convention waited. Later he said he and Nance hoped that by today they would have found a "solution," the Associated Press said.

A. F. of L. officials have said that if necessary their delegates will organize a separate State convention, which the A. F. of L. will recognize.

Fur Coats

Made to Measure

For, in today's market, prices are much higher. It is only because we planned this event months ago that we can offer "individualized" coats at these very low prices.

Further Reasons for Having Your Coat Made Now

● The first choice of skins naturally includes the best. Your coat will be made from the "cream" of the season's pelts.

● Fur prices are not only higher now than when we planned this event—they show a continuing tendency to rise.

● Because our furriers are not busy now, your coat can be given particular attention.

And you may make your own selection from bundles of fine pelts—from newest styles, inspired by Paris coutourieres—try on the style you select in a canvas model—or a coat already made.

If you are hard to fit—this event is especially for you. A special canvas model will be made to assure your coat's fitting perfectly.

Duce Expected To Visit Hitler Retreat May 4

Face-to-Face Parley Hinted as Premier Goes to Meet Schuschnigg.

By the Associated Press.

Venice, April 21.—Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria sped toward Venice tonight for a conference that may foreshadow an even more important face-to-face meeting of statesmen—a visit by Il Duce to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Diplomatic circles heard increasing reports that the premier would fly to Germany for a meeting May 4 at "Der Fuehrer's" Berchtesgaden retreat, but official confirmation was lacking.

A thorough discussion of Italo-German co-operation and all the allied diplomatic topics that such co-operation involves were believed by informed observers to be the aim of such a meeting.

Yacht Scene of Parley.

First, however, Il Duce will talk with Chancellor Schuschnigg to show the world Italo-Austrian relations are still intimate despite the accord with Germany and the Yugoslavian treaty.

The first conference is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, probably aboard the Premier's yacht Aurora, anchored here.

Political circles said the pair would discuss, among other things, a Hapsburg restoration in Austria, a move Mussolini has balked in the past and that Schuschnigg apparently favors in the long run.

Some believed, however, that Italo-German co-operation has become so close Italy is ready to relax her grip on Austrian affairs, once timed to prevent German penetration to Italy's border.

This might pave the way for anschluss (union) between Austria and Germany.

Those favoring the step asserted Italy could defend historic Brenner Pass, her gateway to the north, as well against Germany as against Austria, and that Italo-German commercial relations would be spurred by having Germany as a nex-door neighbor.

Schuschnigg and Il Duce were expected also to discuss closer commercial relations.

Union Miner Says He Was Told to 'Catch 6 o'Clock Train' From Capital.

apart, sit the quiet, well-dressed coal operators and the deputy sheriffs, accused repeatedly of dynamitings, murders, assaults, denial of free assembly and a long category of crimes, and the grim-faced union organizers and citizens of Harlan County, assertedly the victims of an almost feudal system of community life.

No pistols have yet been discovered by the Capitol police, although their search of several spectators has disclosed a number of men wearing empty shoulder holsters. Scornful laughter and the mumbled word "Liar!" are heard from both sides when witnesses of the opposition are on the stand.

Yesterday the committee delved into the happenings at Lynch, Ky., a town in Harlan County that is completely owned and operated by the United States Coal & Coke Co., a 100 per cent subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation.

Organizers Questioned.

In the morning the committee questioned a number of union organizers, who testified they had been unable to obtain permission from the company to have organizers work among the miners in Lynch.

In the afternoon Harry Moses, general superintendent of the company and son of Thomas Moses, its president, said he thought it "necessary" to have control of the town, and that it was unincorporated, because incorporation would mean "added expense."

The town of 12,000 persons is kept orderly, it was testified, by a police force of 13 men, organized and trained by Joseph R. Menefee, an unsworn chief of police, Menefee, on the stand, seemed to irritate the committee by his continuing inability to remember incidents of the last three years. La Follette, after trapping Menefee several times into apparently contradictory answers, pleaded with the husky industrial policeman to "be frank," but Menefee's memory remained dim on nearly every matter brought to his attention.

He suddenly volunteered a direct denial of an organizer's testimony that he had seen, through a keyhole, Menefee discussing labor tactics with some Harlan deputies in a hotel room. He said his memory was very good on that day, and swore he had not been in the hotel room and had not engaged a room on that occasion.

La Follette, without comment, immediately produced Menefee's own expense account, showing he had billed the company for $3.50 rent for the hotel room in question. Menefee, taken aback, did not refute the documentary evidence, and La Follette let the record stand.

Women Investors' Director To Fight Revision of Court

Finance Expert Will Cite Religious Grounds at Senate Hearing.

Miss Cathrine Curtis, national director of Women Investors in America, Inc., will appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee today to voice her organization's opposition to the proposed change of the Supreme Court. The Women's National Committee, an emergency group of the Investors, yesterday established temporary headquarters in the Willard Hotel where court-change-opposing literature is available and members are assembling to support Miss Curtis.

It was said, in advance of her arrival—which was expected last night—that she will oppose the court change on "spiritual and religious" grounds. She will emphasize that a change might have implications of a dictatorship and that dictators have imperiled organized religion.

Miss Curtis, it was said at the headquarters, is a recognized authority on finance, particularly as finance concerns women. She frequently lectures and was national chairman of the First Finance Congress of Women, held last June in Chicago.

She was expected to bring petitions voicing disapproval of the court change. These petitions have circulated in all parts of the United States and a total of approximately 40,000 names were secured in Maryland and Florida alone, it was stated.

The petition, addressed to Congress, said in part: "We * * * urge you as our elected leaders to preserve the constitutional checks and balances established by the Constitution and to insist on and vote for 'Hands Off The Supreme Court.'"

Jail Break Foiled As Fugitive Poises To Slip From Cell

With freedom within his grasp, Raymond Service Sutton, 34, Philadelphia parole breaker, was discovered yesterday just before he would have crawled through the bars of a Police Court cell.

His attempt was foiled by a deputy marshall, tipped off by another prisoner.

Using a toilet seat as a crowbar, Sutton had pried the bars apart enough to allow him to squeeze through. He was on a chair ready to go when found.

He was subdued after a struggle and led before Judge John P. McMahon, who continued the case until today.

Sutton was arrested last week by Detective Sergts. Hugh Robey and Henry Jett after a dizzy chase through downtown streets which ended when Sutton drove his automobile over an embankment.

Police have received telegrams from Philadelphia and Chester, Pa., and Wilmington, Del., asking that he be held to face charges of robbery, housebreaking and automobile theft.

Creech Awaits Grand Jury in Perjury Case

HarlanMine Operator Held Despite Denial of Corridor Threat.

Tough Ted Creech, 35-year-old Harlan County, Ky., mine operator, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of perjury before Senator Robert La Follette's committee.

Creech denied the charge when he appeared before Police Court Judge John P. McMahon demanding a preliminary hearing.

Three witnesses were placed on the stand by Assistant District Attorney Arthur McLaughlin before Judge McMahon decided there was a prima facia case against the "bloody Harlan" mine boss. Creech was bound over and released under the same $2,000 bail which he posted following his arrest in the Senate Office Building Tuesday.

Corridor Threat Charged.

Detective Sergt. Walter J. Beck seized Creech on a warrant sworn to by Richard C. Tackett, Kentucky miner and witness before the committee, and United States Deputy Marshal Robert L. Bonham. He is alleged to have made a false statement under cross-examination by committee members.

John J. Abt, counsel for the investigating committee, told Judge McMahon yesterday that Tackett was in custody of Kentucky authorities for allegedly participating in a plot to bomb the home of an operator.

In the Senate corridor Creech, according to testimony, approached Tackett and Bonham and threatened the former.

Bonham and Tackett both testified that Creech said:

"You came up here and messed up us coal operators. I'll see that you get 8 to 10 years when we get back to Harlan."

Creech Accuses Accuser.

Creech, however, said Tackett came to him insisting "I was drunk the other day when I testified."

Tackett in Police Court yesterday denied making any statement to Creech or having spoken to him at all. Bonham confirmed this.

Following Creech's denial on the stand of Tackett's charges, District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett issued the warrant for Creech. If found guilty he faces a maximum sentence of five years and a $2,000 fine.

Senate Inquiry Asked.

By the Associated Press.

Joe Ozanic, president of the Progressive Miners of America, reported yesterday he had requested a Senate investigation of alleged violations of civil liberties in Illinois.

He said he had notified the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee that 20 Illinois miners had been slain during the past four years by thugs and former convicts, "many of whom were imported into the Illinois coal fields for the purpose of destroying the Progressive Miners of America."

The real American Mixer

Can't get around it... "It's Buick again!"

EVERY flock has to have its leader—and you'll find plenty of proof on the road this summer that Buick's the pace-maker of this year's crop of cars.

So if you'd rather lead the way than follow, you'll take the wise step now, and make sure that when summer comes you're up front in the driver's seat of a Buick.

There's no getting around the power a Buick can pour into the job of getting you there quick and quiet and easy—its valve-in-head straight-eight engine gives you the soaring flight of an eagle when you want to cover ground.

It's got a steady, fretless, road-leveling gait that makes travel effortless as light chasing shadow, whether you're just loafing along or shooting for a record distance for the day.

In this marvel car you ride in seats like easy chairs. You finger controls that seem to sense your next wish in advance. You've got safe brakes to halt its thunderbolt action and bring it gently down to rest with the smooth lightness of misting rain.

You've got a car that's a young man's fancy, light-footed, eager, adventurous—a car that's any man's pride so honest is it in the solid worth of every nut, strut, bolt and thread.

Why handicap yourself this summer when so plainly it's Buick again for value? You'll find this great straight eight easy to buy as the average run of sixes—and if you get your order in now you'll be leading the parade in a bellwether Buick when summer gets here.

NO OTHER CAR IN THE WORLD HAS ALL THESE FEATURES

VALVE-IN-HEAD STRAIGHT-EIGHT ENGINE gives more power per unit of fuel than any other type of engine of equal displacement and compression

Boylan Defends Memorial Site And Architect

chitecture, which has announced that a delegation will appear before the House Library Committee when hearings are opened on Representative Otha Wearin's resolution providing that selection of the memorial design be by open competition.

The House was reminded by the commission chairman that two descendants of Thomas Jefferson—Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Hollins N. Randolph—served on the 12-man body which picked Pope, his classical design adapted from the Roman Pantheon and the Tidal Basin site without holding public hearings.

Boylan assured his colleagues that every precaution was being taken to preserve the Tidal Basin's usefulness as a flushing agent for Washington Channel, cited the numerous public buildings of Washington which have been designed by Pope and deprecated reports the cost of the memorial would be prohibitive.

He denounced Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), of California, for his Jefferson's birthday address of April 13 in which the commission's program was branded "Boylan's folly."

"It was a bitter and untimely speech," he said, "in which the facts were deliberately misrepresented. It is not true that my colleague was denied any facts. He only became interested in the memorial proposition about two months ago when it began to be bandied about in the newspapers."

The D. A. R. resolution condemning erection of the memorial at the expense of the Japanese cherry trees in West Potomac Park was adopted without opposition. It characterizes the blossom display as "one of the beauty spots of our Capital City" and warns that transplanting "is dangerous and would virtually result in the destruction of most of the trees."

"The gift of these trees by the Japanese government," said the resolution, "constitutes a good-will gesture symbolized by the beautiful circle of trees, and to lightly brush aside this gesture would brand the American people as lacking in appreciation and understanding of international courtesy.

"Resolved, that the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, records its opposition to the location of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial that will in any way lead to the removal and destruction of these trees."

Reports were current yesterday that there is a substantial sentiment against the $500,000 memorial item among the members of the subcommittee handling the second deficiency bill, but these reports could not be confirmed. Chairman Edward T. Taylor, who also heads the full Appropriattions Committee, has persistently declined to comment, and the other members also have been reticent to air their views on a matter now being considered in executive session.

Lodge, following action of the citizens' federation last week in opposing the Tidal Basin site, said last night that today he will ask Representative Taylor for an opportunity to inform the appropriations group of his organization's stand.

"Besides the federation itself, more than 15 member bodies have gone on record against the West Potomac Park location," Lodge asserted. "Not one has supported it.

"It seems a shame to tear up the Tidal Basin and change or eliminate the cherry trees when so much money, coming out of the taxpayers' pockets, has gone into their development and maintenance over a period of many years."

Impasse Caused Two Senators To Approve Site of Memorial

By Gerald G. Gross

Critics of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission's selection of the Tidal Basin site have had a hard time reconciling its "unanimous" approval with the fact that the three Senate members were consistently in dissent.

This perplexing point is cleared up by disclosure of the remarks of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, at the commission's last meeting two months ago, when it took a final vote to give the architect's commission to John Russell Pope, fix the site definitely, and delegate the National Park Service as construction agent.

Stuart Gibboney, one of the three representatives of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, Inc., on the commission, had moved the adoption of a resolution selecting the Tidal Basin location. In the ensuing discussion, Senator Charles L. McNary said he would yield, even though he preferred both the Mall and the Anacostia sites to the "fifth cardinal point in the L'Enfant plan."

Urges Anacostia Site.

Chairman John J. Boylan reminded McNary "that the location you have in mind * * * is intended by the planning commission to be taken good care of with lesser public buildings."

Whereupon Senator Thomas said: "Mr. Chairman, your last remark, of course, is the real reason why I have been contending so hard for the Anacostia site. There is only one way to build up the style of that part of the town; that is, to set an example which other buildings will have to follow.

"I have not changed my mind in the least about which of the various sites is the best and which will do the most good to the city. But our problem now is not just the problem of the site but due to the discussion which has arisen in regard to the memorial for Thomas Jefferson, our problem is the problem of being able to defend a temple monument.

"I am so firmly convinced that that is the type of memorial that we should build and that we must have such a complete, united stand for that or else we will have no Thomas Jefferson Memorial of the sort that does make cities into grand places, if you know what I mean, that I am going to be for the basin site with just that understanding."

"I still think it is a mistake, but I am not going to mention that after today."

Lonergan Follows Thomas.

Senator Augustine Lonergan thereupon indorsed Thomas' attitude, saying: "I prefer the Anacostia or the Mall site as against the basin and have so stated, but we want the memorial and if the majority feel otherwise I join with the majority opinion in the adoption of the basin site."

So the vote was unanimous, the three Senators feeling that to hold fast to their convictions might produce a deadlock which would jeopardize the chances of a "temple monument" as opposed to an utilitarian memorial.

At this meeting no argument was presented against the Pope design or appointment of Pope as architect without the holding of a competition. Considerable discussion, however, preceded the favorable vote on designation of the National Park Service as the commission's executive agent.

Though the Boylan group's action on the memorial location was inextricably linked with the survival of the Japanese cherry trees around the Tidal Basin, the stenographic account of its proceedings reveals the members' concern over this problem.

Thomas Hits Basin Site.

The commission had been organized less than two months when, on June 5, 1935, Chairman Boylan requested his colleagues to state which sites they preferred and why. A short time previously they had inspected several likely spots.

Senator Thomas was the first to speak.

"The position that I like least of all is the Tidal Basin," he said, after having given Anacostia as his first choice. "The proposed site on the Tidal Basin mars my sense of proportion. There you already have beauty. To add more beauty would be to mar that which you have. The crowding of monuments to me is sheer ugliness.

"To build in the basin is to crowd. That is what you do when you build a monument within the shadow of the great Washington Monument. It has been suggested that we centralize our jewels. We must not beautify a city as we wear jewels."

Cherry Trees Unique.

"But that is not the only reason. Already there you have an outstanding monument of international goodwill around the Tidal Basin, the cherry trees given by the Japanese government and the Emperor of Japan to the American people. This monument is unique, one of the best, one of the finest monuments that I know anything about in the world, and it is a monument that is going to live.

"You must not ever think of the Japanese cherry trees and the cherry flowers in the terms of the life of an orchard. Those trees do not become beautiful until they are 200 to 300 years old, and no one who has felt the joy of the cherries in Ueno Park can realize what a tremendously great monument has been built here.

"The monument of trees is an idea in itself. It is a commanding idea to anyone who knows its spirit. I might cite other illustrations. This much I will say, that those who have felt the spirit of the world's great tree memorials realize when they are in their midst they are in temples which beget the spirit of the eternal and the universal."

"The beauty of the Tidal Basin must never be marred. The monument to Jefferson must never be belittled by being made one of a group. Beauty when it stands apart contributes more than when it is too closely associated with other beautiful things.

"The people of Washington—the people of America will resent our doing anything to this Cherry Blossom Memorial. The popular reaction would be bad."

Senator Thomas' prophesy has come to pass in greater measure than he dreamed. Yet he was not the only member who warned against disturbance of the trees.

Warners Plan To Build Four New Theaters

Tenleytown, Bethesda, N. E. and Silver Spring Sites Picked.

Immediate construction of four new theaters, involving expenditure of approximately $2,000,000, was announced yesterday by John J. Payette, general zone manager of Warner Brothers theaters in the Washington territory.

The program calls for neighborhood theaters in Tenleytown, Bethesda, Silver Spring and Northeast Washington. They will be of the latest type, including air conditioning equipment and all other improvements for the comfort of patrons. Each will seat 1,000 to 1,500 persons.

Payette said erection of the new theaters was an extension of the building program announced here in December, 1935. Since that time, four new houses have been added by Warner Brothers—the Penn, the Uptown, the Sheridan and the Calvert, which is now being made ready for its formal opening Thursday, May 6.

Although plans and sites have been selected and approved, exact locations of the four theaters have not been announced, pending the completion of contractual negotiations. The completion of this new group will bring the total of theaters operated here by Warner Brothers to 20.

"Construction will get under way in the near future," Payette said.

"Local progress and the rapid expansion of the District necessitate new theaters. We are kepeing pace with the growing needs of the community."

Woman Is Feared Deranged After 3 Suicide Attempts

A woman's insistence upon walking in front of two street cars at Seventh and L streets northwest yesterday landed her in an observation ward in Gallinger Hospital last night.

Police concluded, according to their report, that the woman, Mrs. Bernice Whelan, 38, of 1124 Seventh street northwest, attempted suicide.

Leaving her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Smith, 724 Seventh street northwest, and her grandson, Franklin, 4, she walked into Seventh street toward an approaching street car, the police report said.

The car stopped and she repeated the performance with a trolley coming in the opposite direction. When the second street car stopped, the police report related, the woman rolled on the ground close to the car wheels.

Then, according to police, she rolled out into the street in the path of an oncoming auto. The motorist stopped before striking the woman.

New Navy Hospital Proposed in Bill

Authorization for the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with construction of a new Naval Hospital and Medical School in the vicinity of Washington is provided in a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Authorized cost of the project is limited to $4,850,000. The Federal Government is authorized to accept any tract as a gift for a site.

While present plans of the Navy Department are to build the Naval Medical Center elsewhere than on the present hospital site, no location has been fixed.

Hearings probably will be held on the Vinson bill by the Naval Affairs Committee so that a deficiency appropriation may be passed before Congress adjourns.

29 Indictments Returned Here By Grand Jury

Lansdale to Be Tried in D. C. on Charge of False Check.

In its first official report the District grand jury yesterday returned 29 indictments to Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court.

Included among those indicted was William G. Lansdale, 41, charged with false pretenses in connection with the cashing of a $74 check at the National Bank of Washington. Bank officials said the account had been closed before the check was presented for payment.

Another presentment was one in which Daniel E. Lee, 30, was charged with robbery. He is said to have held up two girls, April 10, at Sixty-third and Clay streets northeast. The girls were Elizabeth E. Steiner, 18, and Mildred R. Parker, 21. Miss Steiner, according to grand jury testimony, fled when Lee approached with a gun and was forced to retrace her steps and show where she had thrown her purse when her life was threatened.

Others indicted were: William E. Greet, Leon Laster and Albert M. Jones, joyriding; William L. Conroy, Charles T. Goodman, George Brooks, Alexander Howard, Jack Matthews and Willie Mae Brown, grand larceny; Richard S. Watson, Edna Ernestine Harris, Andrew Whitworth, John L. Ashby, Russell Smith, Cornelius Myers, James H. Carey and Lucille Jackson, assault with a dangerous weapon.

William H. Miller and Perry Williams, assault with intent to commit rape; Perry Williams, rape, and Joseph W. King, perjury.

Those whose cases were ignored by the grand jury were: Wong Tip, Mark Ging and Chen Han, narcotic charges, and Phillip N. Kadil, violation of the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act.

A Haven For Tax Dodgers.

Reports that the District is being defrauded of large sums which should be collected under the intangible property tax are scarcely news. That practice has been in effect for many years. Citizens and local officials have protested against it. Congress has taken note of the leaks and tried feebly to enact new taxes. But nothing has been accomplished.

The inefficiency of the District's tax collecting methods has been amply demonstrated in recent months. Fortunately efforts are now being made to modernize this system. But there is no hope that any improvement in collecting machinery will make the levy on intangible personal property a satisfactory tax. The major defect is in the law itself.

From 1923 to 1936 the tax rate on intangibles remained constantly at one-half of 1 per cent. Yet the percentage of District revenue obtained from this source has substantially declined. This record sets up a strong implication that more people learn to evade this unscientific levy every year.

The Mapes committee condemned the intangible property tax and recommended enactment of an income tax to take its place. That advice was repeated in the recent Jacobs report on fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments. The Jacobs committee concluded:

> The experience of the States over more than 75 years has demonstrated the impossibility of assessing this type of property with any approach to generality or equality. It becomes a tax on honesty with a premium upon evasion, and in the end rests on a small body of conscientious or ignorant taxpayers or upon those groups whose form of business puts them peculiarly at the mercy of the assessor. None of these characteristics is commonly considered a canon of sound taxation.

So long as Congress leaves such obsolete measures on the statute books the District will be at the mercy of tax-dodgers. The District has no authority whatever to modernize its revenue system. Citizens can only hope that the Commissioners' tales of tax evasion will prove so shocking that Congress will be goaded into action.

Hayashi Faces Defeat.

When it forced dissolution of the Japanese Diet last month, the Hayashi cabinet no doubt anticipated an easy victory in the forthcoming general elections. Japanese governments have a way of winning at the polls. It is, therefore, surprising to discover that practically all disinterested observers are now predicting the overwhelming defeat of the Hayashi government in the voting on April 30.

This unique situation is attributable to the widespread popular dissatisfaction with the government's sudden move in ordering dissolution of the Diet. It was plainly a maneuver by the militarists to overcome the growing opposition of that body to policies which have brought the island empire to the verge of disaster. But that very circumstance has resulted in an intensification of the struggle long raging between the militarists and the civilian leaders over the control of the government. The major political parties and even certain of the smaller parties, such as the Kokumin Domei, that previously supported the government, are bitter in their criticism of the cabinet and have made the dissolution of the Diet their main campaign issue.

This opposition the Hayashi government could ignore were it possible to create a new government party to which it might throw the full weight of its support. As it happens, however, the proposed "third party" has never come into being. Party leaders have run away from the prospect of heading it as though it were the plague. And having no leadership it can have no following. The government's defeat, therefore, is clearly indicated.

This does not mean, however, that once the election is over and the new Diet is summoned civil control will be re-established in Japan. It is most unlikely that the militarists, even after an overwhelming defeat, would be prepared to abandon their struggle for complete power. It is thus not unlikely that soon after the new Diet meets it will be dissolved and still another election called. After having failed to secure what they seek by a frontal attack the militarists may decide on a war of attrition. They may decide to tire out the opposition by holding one election after another until the parliamentarians are ready to call quits. The outlook for political stability in Japan continues, therefore, to be dubious.

The Playgrounds Tangle.

One of the most important tasks confronting the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations is to straighten out the tangle over District playgrounds. As the local supply bill passed the House, it splits the function of the playground department between two different agencies without rhyme or reason. What little progress has been made toward co-ordination is obviously jeopardized by this casual juggling of funds and facilities.

There are sound arguments in favor of granting the schools a larger measure of jurisdiction over playgrounds operated primarily for children. But that does not minimize the House's blunder. It would shift to the Board of Education's Community Center about half the municipal playgrounds which are not property of the schools. Some of these, now operated by the Playgrounds Department, are a considerable distance from any school. Others even more closely connected with the school system are not included in the proposed transfer. That fact alone suggests botchery which should not be permitted to stand.

Undoubtedly the intentions of the Congressmen who engineered this shift were good. They took note of the duplication, overlapping and rivalry between the diverse recreational agencies functioning in the District. They realized that something ought to be done. But in working out a remedy they seem to have gone backward instead of forward. Division of existing departments is the antithesis of co-ordination.

A logical application of the policy accepted by the House would result in transferring all municipal playgrounds to the Board of Education. The schools are admirably equipped to manage play centers for children, and the Community Center is already operating on a 12-month basis. Closer co-ordination between class-room work and recreational activities is certainly desirable.

The Playground Department, or some similar agency responsible to the Commissioners, could then be given full responsibility for the operation of recreational facilities in the parks—baseball diamonds, swimming pools, etc. The Office of National Capital Parks would thus become merely a maintenance agency, leaving the supervision of recreational activities entirely to local authorities.

But the committee did not go that far. Indeed, no appropriations committee ought to assume the responsibility of reorganizing governmental agencies. The current muddle is a typical example of what happens when such groups attempt to pass important legislation by means of "riders" on supply bills.

In any event the proposed change is inopportune. A program co-ordinating committee is just beginning to function. Drastic changes might well be postponed until this agency has been given a chance to bring order out of the present confused situation. More important, a committee appointed by the Commissioners is analyzing the entire structure of the District government to effect a reorganization in the interests of economy and efficiency.

Whether or not the present plan for co-ordination of programs is successful, it should lead to consolidation of playgrounds. But that step should be carefully undertaken in accord with the advice of experts. Casual tinkering through appropriation bills is all too likely to make an unsatisfactory situation worse.

Outlook For Reorganization.

"Too busy with other legislation!" Such is Senator Robinson's laconic explanation of the inaction of the Joint Committee on Executive Reorganization to which was referred the plan for overhauling administrative agencies of the Federal Government. The magnitude of the program presented to Congress by the President more than two months ago would undoubtedly excuse delay in formulating a legislative program. But it does not account for the fact that the committee has not met for several weeks. If any progress is to be made at this session, the committee ought to be working overtime.

Innumerable controversial issues have been raised by the reorganization report. Some of the proposed changes, such as the extension of the civil service to cover all but the highest posts, are admirable. Others are dubious or undesirable. All of the major recommendations, moreover, have to be judged not only on their individual merits but in relation to the general plan.

Although adequate legislative handling of the reorganization program precludes omnibus legislation, such as the Administration has favored, there must be a general plan in the background. Otherwise we should have haphazard changes that would serve no purpose. In any event, the task of carrying through a far-reaching reorganization program without disrupting governmental processes is immensely difficult.

The President's proposals would effect a revolutionary transformation of the administrative machinery of the Government and enormously increase the power of the Chief Executive. That plan calls for the most careful scrutiny on the part of Congress. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that Congressional leaders regard the reorganization project as a distasteful chore they would like to forget.

But the questionable nature of some parts of the plan does not make its constructive features the less desirable. The reasonable course would seem to be enactment at this session of the non-controversial sections of the program, leaving major changes in policy for further deliberation.

The Labor Conferences.

Now that the Supreme Court has upheld the Wagner act, both employers and employes are interested in devising methods of collective bargaining that will stabilize employment and minimize the danger of strikes and lockouts. Through informal interchange of opinions, industrial and trade-union leaders familiar with the processes of collective bargaining can be of great assistance to groups with little or no experience in this field. Recognizinz the value of such informal discussions, Secretary of Labor Perkins is making a commendable effort to bring representatives of the Government, of industry, and of organized labor together around the council table.

The first meeting held on Tuesday is said to have been so informative and frictionless that Miss Perkins plans to hold a series of similar conferences in the near future. The appearance at the opening conference of President Green of the A. F. of L. and Chairman Lewis of the C. I. O. is highly encouraging. Objective examination of the problems that confront organized labor in bargaining with employers emphasizes the common aims of these groups, and calls attention to the folly of factional disputes. Hence, the opportunities for a "meeting of minds" in the projected conferences may mitigate the bitterness of the quarrel between the Green and Lewis adherents, and help to bring about a reconciliation.

Informal conferences also offer excellent opportunities to eradicate the mutual distrust existing between employer and employe groups—a distrust born of ignorance and lack of direct contact. Legal recognition of the right of workers to bargain collectively is only preliminary to the establishment of effective systems through which routine negotiations may be carried on and peace may be maintained. The success of collective bargaining depends upon the wisdom, tolerance, and sense of responsibility of the parties to agreements. The conference is a great aid to intelligent enforcement of measures like the Wagner act which leaves the formulation of methods of procedure to be worked out by those directly concerned.

Another Boys' Club.

The Police Department has opened its first club for Negro boys. It was appropriate that not only District authorities, but leading laymen as well should have been present at the ceremonies. For the institution is certain to have a considerable influence on the future of the city.

Located at Twelfth and U streets northwest, the club is designed to serve colored boys from all parts of the community until such time as another club can be added. Enrollment in the new club has already reached several hundred, and 3,000 to 5,000 are ultimately expected to join. The number of Washington boys counting on policemen as friends and allies will then be doubled, there being over 4,000 members already in the local boys' club movement. Eleven supervisors will direct the new organization, four holding college degrees and all being trained in physical culture and other phases of juvenile development. The equipment and facilities at their command are the best and most extensive in the city.

This work of the police deserves fullest congratulation. The significance of bending "human twigs" in the right direction is today coming to be wholly appreciated. Crime is in large part a problem of youth. By interesting itself in the healthy growth of Washington's rising generation, Maj. Brown's department is demonstrating its capacity to meet that problem from the most constructive approach.

A National Issue.

Any suspicion that the criticism currently pouring down upon the Jefferson Memorial plans is the work of a few local residents is blasted by the vote recorded yesterday in the D. A. R. convention. With complete unanimity, delegates from every part of the country protested against the proposed Tidal Basin location for the memorial. Their objections were that removal of the cherry trees would destroy "one of the beauty spots of the Capital City" and, further, would constitute an offense against the Japanese who presented them to the Nation.

Thus the mutilation of the Tidal Basin area is seen to be a national issue. And properly so. The great Democrat who was our third President is a national hero and Washington is a national city. The whole Nation is naturally concerned to give Thomas Jefferson a fitting and pleasing monument; the whole Nation, too, is deeply disturbed over the proposal to tamper with the cherry blossoms. Under such circumstances, there is every reason to demand and expect to obtain full reconsideration of the plans before any construction begins.

Congressmen are forever behind with their work. A few days ago a Senator wrote a letter to a general who has been dead for 115 years.

It would be just too bad if baseball players were to join a labor union. About time the game got started, the umpire would yell "Strike!" and every player on the field would sit down.

A Spaniard's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Ivo de Capet, argues for the return of Alphonso XIII and would have him establish an absolute monarchy and rule perhaps a la Mussolini, on the ground that Spaniards, inclined to anarchism, are unable to govern themselves.

To prove his contention your correspondent quotes from the twelfth century coronation ceremony wherein it says, "We who are as important as you and who together are more powerful than you; we promise to obey your government, if you maintain our rights and privileges, and if not, no." Now anarchism is predicated on the theory that all government is an evil. But as above quoted the Spanish people, proud as they are and mindful of their prerogatives, accept a government but say to their sovereign, "We will obey you if you fulfill your constitutional obligations; if not—no!" Alphonso was born a king. It is true nevertheless that he had a constitution to go by and moreover he had sworn to uphold it on the Bible.

Yet, during his reign it is history that he recognized but two political parties: the church and the army. In 1909, when Alphonso turned Morocco over to the army, public opinion revolted. There is one thing that the Spanish people are done with forever, and that is worrying foreign nations out of the peaceful enjoyment of their own soil. Thousands of Spaniards were slaughtered in that and successive campaigns. For years the Spanish people suffered under petty tyrannies, unjust death sentences, squandering of public, and confiscation of private, money; exile of prominent citizens against all law and equity, insubordination of army officers. As our own Declaration of Independence says: "Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed."

It was this patience wherewith the Spanish people endured the long years of Alphonso's misgovernment, including the seven years of that lawless dictatorship, which became necessary for the safety of an autocratic monarchy, precisely because the parliamentary system had begun to work. PETER BORRAS.

Place For 'Self-Restraint.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A headline in this morning's paper reads, "Bench Still Lacks Justices of Self-Restraint, Cummings Declares in Plea for Reform Plan." The article then discussed Mr. Cummings' speech on the radio last night, regarding the "need" for additional justices of the United States Supreme Court, etc.

"Self-restraint" is rather ill-chosen, coming from such a source. The truth is that during the recent court-reorganization-plan discussion the judiciary of the country, particularly the Supreme Court, has set a fine example of self-restraint; an example that has been the more conspicuous because of the seeming lack of that desirable quality in high places. While pettiness, envy, hatred and ignorance have been hurling their shafts at the judiciary, especially our highest tribunal, the justices have preserved a calm, intelligent dignity that should have abashed their critics.

Now that loose thinking has brought loose talk and shallow criticism from those temporarily in authority, it is not surprising (but nonetheless shocking) o hear hisses from the audiences in some of the local movie theaters when the pictures of the justices have been shown upon the screen. One reflects, "The rabble-rousers have apparently done their work well." It looks as though it has not been enough to try to tamper with the personnel of the Court, but that there has likewise been a campaign of vilification in an effort to discredit it in the eyes of the people; thereby engendering a disrespect for all courts and the law itself, which is indeed a "grievous fault"—(add the rest of the quotation, changing the verb to future tense!) However, "this, too, will pass." The human mind being as unstable as water, the idol of today often becomes the scapegoat of tomorrow; and vice versa.

As for the "reform plan"—what reform plan? That one by which the great congestion in the Federal courts would be relieved? Perhaps the news hasn't yet filtered through to official circles that last spring Congress created five new judgeships for this purpose, and that until the last few weeks, at any rate, not one appointment had been made to fill those vacancies. What price "congestion?"

"What this country needs" is a "reform" in its thinking, an intelligent appraisal of present trends; a refusal to be deceived by political chicanery, and swayed by narrow partisanship. This country needs, particularly, greater self-restraint on the part of Cabinet members, Government officials and others in responsible positions.

More Comment On The Memorial Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The approved plan to uproot the Japanese cherry trees and put a concrete fill in the Tidal Basin as start on a memorial which will cost the taxpayers several million dollars raises the question of whether the public that pays the bills but whose wishes in the matter are not consulted, should not in self-protection organize a society to prevent the further perpetration of monuments and memorials.

While it is doubtless true that all such undertakings are useful to certain groups since they provide publicity for their authors, profits for the architects and for the concerns that supply the materials, and not infrequently valuable opportunities for politicians, they do not always appear designed in the interest of the general public.

In view of the problems involved, it would not seem unreasonable to suggest that any monument to be erected or memorial to be established at the public expense should be required to meet certain minimum conditions as follows: (1) There should be a recognized public demand; (2) The monument or memorial should serve a useful public purpose; (3) It should be something of enduring worth or beauty; (4) Its construction should not involve the destruction of existing beauty which belongs to the public; (5) The planning, award and construction should be so supervised as to insure protection of the public interests and avoidance of possible favoritism and graft.

E. M. JOHNSON.
Washington, April 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been much said about our Government expenditures, and quite rightly, too. In our own City of Washington and in our Congress would be a fine place to start.

Why do we need to spend $4,000,000 now to extend the facade of your beautiful Capitol 8 or more feet? This is not time to do it. And why, oh why must we have the Jefferson Memorial now of all times when we need that money for flood control and soil erosion, and to help our poor?

Our Declaration of Independence is Jefferson's Memorial. Transfer it to the Archives Building and surround it properly. That would be a memorial worth talking about and would cost so little. Please, Mr. President and Congress, declare a moratorium on spending for the rest of this year anyway. Please, please do.

A TIRED-OUT PATRIOT.
Washington, April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Free-for-all fights are just in my line, so I thought I'd say my bit in the Jefferson Memorial vs. Cherry Blossoms brawl. The "gentleman of the White House" is asking for a very reasonable thing, a monument to the "Great Democrat," for the "Great Republican" has already appropriated a very fine position and it wouldn't do to have a second memorial to some other Republican capture the last coveted position. But would it be representative of Jefferson to destroy something beautiful to erect something of doubtful beauty?

Why not include in the plans for this memorial a lake or pond, say, in the shape of a huge tree itself with the structure at the base or trunk of the pond and cherry-blossom trees along the edge? If well done, this plan, or something similar to it, would be far more beautiful than the scraggly show which the widely separated trees present today.

This memorial would far outshine any ordinary marble building which, no matter how beautiful architecturally, could never by itself have the appeal of a beautifully planned arrangement of cherry trees.

So the persons who profit from the cherry-blossom display would be injured only during the construction and for a short period after, possibly. And the President and his flock on Capitol Hill would have a memorial to be proud of.

DANIEL BOON.
Washington, April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I join other Washington citizens in thanking you for your editorials and letters published protesting against the destruction of the beautiful cherry trees around Tidal Basin? They have done more than any other single thing to cause Washington to be called the "City Beautiful."

Will you be the first to call a mass meeting of the citizens who wish to protest to the appropriation committee before they appropriate the money to begin this wanton destruction? Ask Mr. Boylan and his committee to explain to the people why they wish to erect a useless memorial to a man who above all others was democratic and was ever interested in educating the masses.

Let the people speak before their money is spent in such a foolish way. An auditorium where such meetings could be held, where all the people could occasionally hear their President instead of the favored few who can always obtain cards would be much more fitting.

READER.
Washington, April 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I ask, what could be a more fitting monument to the genius of Jefferson than a surpassingly beautiful classic design of John Russell Pope? What a more appropriate setting than that proposed?

After all, was it not Thomas Jefferson who introduced in our country the classical style of architecture? Did he not know that styles would come and go, but always the classic would reign supreme in beauty and nobility of design? Why not then remember a man whose beauty and depth of soul, we recognize, whose nobility of heart and mind, all know, by a monument built in the architecture of all ages?

You prate of democratic principles. Yet, because they seem to be undergoing swift changes, is it fair to erect a memorial to Jefferson appropriate to the times only? Jefferson will be cherished by each succeeding generation. Then his monument must be one that will be an honor to his memory through the ages.

The cherry trees will grow again. And what are a few years of broken ground and torn drives compared to the glory of Pope's monument that will tell future ages of the hopes and ideals of Thomas Jefferson?

The Post Impressionist

Sakura-No-Hana.

THERE'S nothing new about the cherry blossoms, but aren't they lovely? Fancy such daintiness of form and color being possible in a matter-of-fact world!

How clumsy are our own efforts at imitation of these flowers. The blooms are typical of the Flower Kingdom and of the Japanese. Nor is it a far cry from the flowers to the Japanese ladies in their delicate and graceful silks. The petals suggest miniature fans.

Surely there was never a more gracious gesture of friendship between nations than the gift of these trees to this country. Each recurrent blossoming reminds us that sister trees are blooming in their native Tokyo. Companion to the reflected loveliness of the Lincoln Memorial and its cherry trees is the picture of Fuji-San, the far-famed, snow-capped national mountain of Japan, mirrored in the blue waters of Tokyo Bay.

Most of those who view the trees around the Tidal Basin, and later the double blossoms along Potomac Park, will remember something of their origin in the gift of 2,000 trees from the Japanese government to the United States.

Were such a thing to happen today it would be less significant, as both countries are accustomed to the exchange of courtesies, but let us think back.

* * * *

Japan was almost entirely closed to foreign trade when President Fillmore dispatched the Perry expedition to Japan in 1852. Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry had been made commander-in-chief of the United States naval forces in the East India, China and Japan seas, and given great discretionary powers to obtain from Japan certain objectives. These included "friendship, commerce, a supply of coal and provisions, and protection for our shipwrecked people." All of these objectives he obtained.

He succeeded where a man of less understanding sympathy must have failed. He appraised the Japanese as "a people of unaffected grace and dignity," and being, himself, a man of like characteristics, he was able to meet them on a basis that commanded their respect and friendship. He went to Japan in the capacity of envoy from a great and powerful country, representative of the President of the United States, to a country that was then of small international consequence though potentially great. He refused to negotiate with underofficials, and was received by men in high authority.

* * * *

From very early days the country had been virtually ruled by the Shogun, a military governor and dictator, who had his capital in Yedo, rather than by the titular head, the Mikado, whose capital was Kyoto. It was, therefore, those close to the Shogun with whom negotiations took place.

The Shogun's commissioners exchanged hospitality with Commodore Perry and his officers, and Perry matched their gifts fittingly with gifts for themselves and for the government. The gifts included a railroad locomotive, the first in Japan. When, later, the first railroad was completed, it was the occasion for the Japanese flag's being unfurled for the first time in honor of the emperor. The flag was first used abroad when the first Japanese foreign ambassador came to the United States.

* * * *

The entrance of the United States into trade relations was followed in the next few years by negotiations with other nations. The Mikado had opposed the treaty. A pioneer diplomat of that day was Baron Kamon-No-Kami Naosuke, who sided with emperor. However, he was won over to the side of the Shogun and accepted the post of Prime Minister in the Shogun's government.

Zealots of the Foreign Exclusion party interpreted his siding with the Shogunate as treasonable to the Mikado, and in 1860, they assassinated the baron. A statue of this great leader may be found in the new national museum of the Smithsonian group.

The treaty with Japan was signed March 31, 1854. It marked a great change in Japan's international trade relations and resulted in her becoming a world power.

In 1927, the children of America sent the children of Japan a gift of dolls which went to various sections of Japan as "good will ambassadors." The Japanese children reciprocated by sending dolls to the American children, one to each State and a few others to leading cities. Thus was good will extended to another generation in both countries.

In sharing the Sakura-No-Hana (cherry blossom) with us, Japan shared the inspiration of thousands of poems written alike by mikados and commoners, by the Hundred Poets and by other poets. The present emperor, Hirohito, is a poet. Remembering the mirrored blossoms which to the Japanese are symbolic of perfection, we add a fervent amen to his words:

> That the world may be > Calm as the sea
> At morn is my prayer
> To the Gods that be.

Florida-Georgia War.

Miami.

FLORIDA AND GEORGIA have recently been engaged in an interstate trade war not unlike those rivalries which create custom posts on European borders where the perfidious peasant goes to prison for smuggling an egg in his hat. This particular problem has been settled happily by diplomacy and a rank violation of law but the case raises again the question whether this is a nation or a group of snarling and mutually vindictive little countries preying on one another and all preying on the Union.

Georgia levied a tax of $200 a year on Georgia wholesale dealers handling sea food produced in Florida and other States. In retaliation several Florida coastal counties, threatened to levy similar taxes on Florida firms handling Georgia's agricultural products. In this predicament Governor Rivers of Georgia took it on himself to suspend the license law—a precedent which might justify the nullification of laws against rape and murder—and Florida was appeased.

MEANWHILE Florida is debating a law to exclude American firms in other States from operating chains or branches and all managers residing elsewhere from doing business here. This would not apply to the horse and dog tracks and the slot machines, which are part of a chain store system, or to the gambling houses of the pleasure coast, which follow an established, interstate circuit, like that of an old-fashioned horseback Bible-flogger.

The tracks this year paid $24,000 to each of Florida's 67 counties, some of which have no more than 3,000 inhabitants—black and white—and this windfall, combined with $50,000 per county derived from the gasoline tax, gives such communities almost complete freedom from the tax problem.

The official revenue from the gambling houses and one-armed bandits is comparatively small out of the graft that is beyond belief and represents one of the chief rewards of statesmanship in the peninsula.

• • • •

THE SALE of pardons to convicts appears to be another lucrative sideline in a life dedicated to the public service. In this community of political mobility it is not surprising that Florida regards the suspension of a law by the Georgia Governor as a virtuous act of amity by one State toward another.

Florida's hostility to outside business interests is not unique, but her case is rather special, because she lives mainly on the patronage of spenders drawn from other States to enjoy her climate and certain tax immunities. If other States could refuse passports to their citizens to visit Florida, or limit the money they could take with them, as Hitler and Mussolini do, the retaliation would ruin the State in a single season.

If New York and Illinois, for example, should set a prohibitive tariff on Florida oranges and vegetables in reprisal for the exclusion of New York and Illinois companies, that would be more like Florida's course against Georgia.

Yet if it is lawful for a State to exclude goods produced by convicts or children it would be just as reasonable for New England to impose high tariffs on the manufactures of cheap Southern labor. And all such restrictions tend to limit the citizenship of the individual to the State in which he votes and give him an alien status in others, like that of a Briton in Italy.

• • • •

EVEN NOW an American has become a foreigner in certain portions of his own land, for several States have adopted immigration restrictions and many counties and towns have localized Americanism to the extent of robbing motorists whose license plates show them to be aliens from other parts.

Like robber barons, they stride through routes and meet their running expenses by exorbitant fines for innocent violations of trick regulations enforced by brigands in police uniform.

But the worst stench of this altogether smelly provincialism arises from the fact that a poor American may be barred from certain States of his native land merely because he is poor. Florida and California have been the most brutal offenders in this matter, although most Southern States regard poverty in a stranger as strong evidence of criminality.

Better tests of desirability suggest themselves, particularly as to Florida. For two I would suggest the Bertillon and the Wassermann.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Jimmy" Walker, former mayor of New York, has become a yachtsman. He has bought a 50-foot cruiser. We knew James had taken to the water, but didn't know he had gone that far.

• • • •

It is now Capt. Walker. The former mayor will have to wear a yachting cap, a blue double-breasted coat, white flannels and yachting shoes. It may be this that lured him to the sea. He had exhausted all men's styles for land wear.

• • • •

This department's notion of the marine crisis of the century will be reached when Jimmy's yacht and Judge Seabury's boat approach each other and it becomes a question which has the right of way.

• • • •

Elmer Twitchell, the old-time yachting expert, today dropped a few lines to Jimmy welcoming him to the fleets of Long Island Sound and giving him a few helpful tips. "There is one thing you should practice right away," warned Elmer. "This is the art of going into the cabin without bumping your noggin. A new boat owner spends the first summer with his head in a sling, as a rule, and it seems to me you have had bumps enough already, Jimmy.

• • • •

"I think you should also be told that the night life on a small boat is pretty dull, and that when you go ashore for a dance you must remember that the trip back from the dock to the ship cannot be made by taxicab.

• • • •

"You had better get a little acquainted with things like tide and current tables, compass readings and ship charts, too, Jimmy. No amateur sailor ever understands the darned things, but it is a good idea to throw a bluff.

• • • •

"I assume you will have a paid skipper to run things. I would urge this, Jimmy, because when a blow comes up or you find yourself in a fog you can't get out of it merely by a resolution to table everything until the next meeting.

• • • •

"You should also master a few nautical terms to avoid embarrassment. When somebody asks you to take the wheel you should know it isn't a reference to a gambling device, and you should always understand that a tiller has nothing to do with the Tiller girls.

• • • •

"I will give you a few definitions in closing:

"Port—Not a wine, Jimmy, but the left side of the ship.

"Starboard—The other side.

"Hatch—An opening in the deck; nothing to do with eggs.

"Stuffing box—You can let the paid hand bother about this; it has nothing to do with election returns.

"Mooring—In plain language, a parking space.

Individualism Or Collectivism?

Following is a substantial section of a lecture delivered last night at the New School of Social Research in New York City.

By Ogden L. Mills.

THAT ALL PROGRESS is born of individual effort, and that man's creative genius flourishes only in an atmosphere of freedom has been proved beyond question. How otherwise can you account for the fact that when technological improvements came with giant strides they originated in those countries where the individual enjoyed the greatest freedom—the United States and England? From Russia and Spain came nothing.

Then came the World War, with its frightful slaughter, its immense destruction of wealth, its unnatural expansion and diversion of productive energy, its hammer-blow to the intricate and delicate mechanism of trade, commerce and the monetary systems, and the complete centralization of all power in the hands of governments.

When the guns were silenced, men and women turned hopefully to the task of restoring their shattered dwelling in the light of their ancient faith. But the dislocations, the new strains and stresses and the fatal weaknesses engendered by the war were too great. The new and flimsy edifices they erected collapsed under the new impact of the Great Depression.

Despairing people turned away from the individual and his freedom to discover new gods . . . and, in so doing, only disinterred ancient idols.

Individual Liberties Seen Failing Everywhere.

TODAY, everywhere, individual liberties are being curtailed and destroyed. Democracy and self-government are scrapped. Individuals are once more the pawns of arbitrary rulers whose policies are determined by nationalistic alms, with war as their ultimate and supreme weapon.

Nations are feverishly rearming. New instruments of destruction are being forged from diminishing resources. People whose salvation depends upon mutual co-operation in the peaceful process of reconstruction are staring at each other with growing mistrust and antagonism. International trade languishes. Standards of living are falling. Great nations are being threatened with economic collapse—and, to sustain economic life, governments are creating purchasing power by exhausting a rapidly vanishing credit.

Or, to put it quickly:

Today, the world seems to be driven by an irresistible fate to an irretrievable disaster.

It is not a heartening picture I have drawn for you—but, it is a true one.

It is with that picture in mind that, at the outset of these lectures, I want to ask certain questions—questions, the answers to which are at the core of my political philosophy:

1. In the long run will not men and women, through democratic process, govern themselves more wisely and beneficially than any dictator?

2. Is the abundance so essential to a higher standard of living more likely to be generated by the creative energy of the individual operating in a system of free enterprise than by the sterile direction of a government bureaucracy?

3. Is the peace we long for more likely to find a secure foundation in economic co-operation among peoples rather than in narrow nationalism?

4. Are those spiritual values which are directly related to individual liberty—freedom of religion, of thought, of speech, of education, and of science—worth preserving?

Republicans Challenged By New Social Philosophy.

IF THESE QUESTIONS are answered in the affirmative—as I believe they must be—then somewhere men and women must once again go forth in battle for a great cause.

That is the task I would assign to the Republican Party of the future.

To those who think of the Republican Party simply as the party of reaction, of big business, and of high protection, such a notion may sound completely fantastic or completely insincere.

Yet I would remind you that the Republican Party was born of a great liberal movement in behalf of human freedom; that for over half a century, with only two brief intermissions, it governed the Nation throughout a period of unparalleled social and economic progress; and that, in spite of 25 years of apparent disintegration, through a strange combination of circumstances, it is today the sole residuary legatee of the tradition in the United States, that the individual man has rights independent of and prior in nature to government, and that no government may deny him these rights without arresting progress and making men slaves.

OGDEN L. MILLS.

The division in the ranks of the Republican Party, which definitely appeared in 1910 and culminated in the third party movement in 1912 was never healed. From that day on, the party lacked national unity and cohesion. It lost its sense of direction.

The unity achieved in 1918 and 1920 was not deep. Victory in 1920 was due more to anti-war, anti-European and anti-Wilson feeling than it was to Republican cohesion and strength. The steady waning of the party's influence over the course of the next ten years in such key States as New York makes this clear.

It won in 1924 because times were better and because of confidence in Coolidge. It won again in 1928 because of boom prosperity and confidence in Hoover. Neither election indicated that the people had any great interest in the Republican Party or the Democratic Party, as such.

The truth is that the old issues upon which the parties divided had largely disappeared. There were no fundamental differences between them. Even in the matter of the tariff the Democrats, for the most part, had become protectionists in practice if not in theory. Although the world was confronted with new conditions and novel problems from which new issues were converging, in the 12 years, which came to an end in 1932, these issues had not emerged in the United States.

Post-War Reconstruction Clear Now As Gross Failure.

THIS IS NOT to be wondered at since our efforts from 1920 to 1929 were directed largely in trying to restore the prewar world we had known. In other words, it was a period of reconstruction—reconstruction which at one time appeared to have been achieved.

At home the energies of the Government were directed toward demobilizing the war machine, restoring peace-time conditions, putting the Government's house in order, reducing the burden of taxes and laying the foundation of renewed prosperity. Industrial progress was achieved on a large scale, although agricultural recovery lagged stubbornly, and in time unhealthy speculative activities brought inevitable retribution.

Abroad, Europe sought to find peace through a new system of collective security.

Some semblance of economic order appeared in the world. Trade revived and production increased enormously. International investment was resumed on an unprecedented scale. The value of stocks and other securities rose.

But side by side with these evidences of world recovery there were deep-seated maladjustments. The universal dislocations had not been mended. The social, political, and economic forces engendered by a disastrous war and an equally disastrous peace had not spent their force. They culminated in the Great Depression.

Post-war reconstruction had failed. The task was more formidable than anyone had dreamed. We are still wrestling with it.

Hoover Administration Declared Courageous Effort.

THE HISTORY of the Hoover Administration is the history of a series of courageous—and with one or two notable exceptions—constructive and successful measures intended to parry one devastating blow after another. Considering the fact that we were in the downward spiral of an immense deflation, these measures were necessarily defensive in character, and intended to prevent disintegration until the normal forces of recovery could assert themselves.

It is sometimes said that these measures invoked the power of the Federal Government on such a comprehensive scale that Mr. Hoover laid the foundation for the New Deal.

Excepting in the case of the Agricultural Marketing act, and of the Farm Board, I cannot agree to the validity of the charge. There is a great distinction between Government leadership and Government coercion. Likewise, there is a great distinction between support of Government and supplanting by Government. And, in addition, there is all the difference in the world between a spirit and a purpose determined to preserve existing institutions and one equally determined to weaken or pervert them.

While, from a strict viewpoint, the Hoover program may have represented an innovation; and, under the stress of a great emergency, a temporary departure from traditional practices, it did no violence to basic principles.

In the campaign of 1932 the Democrats adopted as their platform an admirable restatement of their historic position. The Republicans stood on the record of the Hoover Administration.

Mr. Roosevelt accepted his party's platform without qualifications. He went through the entire campaign without giving a hint of how completely he intended to jettison it. Mr. Hoover sensed what was coming. He repeatedly challenged Mr. Roosevelt to be frank, but without success.

The people, wearied by the long depression and determined to have a change, turned a deaf ear. Except for the obvious fact that Mr. Hoover was going out and Mr. Roosevelt was coming in, there was an air of unreality about it all.

But there has been nothing unreal about events since.

New Deal Legislation Aims at Planned Economy.

WE HAVE SEEN the Government undertake to control production in agriculture, manufacturing and mining. We have seen it attempt the regulation of prices, wages and conditions of labor. We have seen it determine the volume and flow of credit. We have seen the arbitrary debasement of our currency. We have seen the Federal Government enter the field of private enterprise in competition with its own citizens. We have seen a whole body of new legislation intended to establish a planned economy.

And, having seen all that, we do not need the President's declaration that he has created "new instruments of public power"—that the Federal Government is responsible for the solution of the problems of the individual—to know that we are face to face with a new philosophy; or that a new political party has been born.

What is equally important is that, for the time being, the American people have accepted this new political philosophy; and have charged the National Government with full responsibility for the economic conditions under which they live and work.

For want of a better name we may call this new party the New Deal Party. While it has taken over the name and organization of the historic Democratic Party, it has nothing in common with it. In fact—and as every Democrat knows—it repudiates every major article of the Democratic faith.

That is why I say the Democratic Party, as it has been known, has ceased to exist.

This is almost as true of the Republican Party. The issues which gave it vigor in its prime have vanished. The conditions which ensured its political supremacy have disappeared. Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio are doubtful States. New York, Illinois and Massachusetts have already gone over to the other side.

Today there exists a strongly organized, well-led militant New Deal Party—and, I might add, it is a well-fed New Deal Party, as well. It proclaims a political philosophy new to America.

On the other hand, there are some 17,000,000 quite thoroughly disorganized individuals who vote as Republicans, and who, as I have said, are the heirs of the American tradition, there being no other claimants.

Collectivism Described Pitted Against Individualism.

TODAY two major political forces are fighting for supremacy in the world.

One is the all-powerful Collectivism.

The other is Individualism.

I believe the hope of mankind is in free individuals determined to keep what is worth preserving, especially their freedom to choose.

But if in this country the 17,000,000 who voted "no" are to be united in a revitalized and militant organization, they must have leadership. They must have the capacity to develop a program. They must demonstrate that they are not fighting for empty and outworn ideals. They must prove that they can deal realistically with the problems of the day. They must be prepared to satisfy the legitimate demands of the people. Above all, they must have unshakeable faith and unchallengeable sincerity.

In view of the present-day perversion of the meaning of the term "liberal," I would make this the party of conservatism.

Conservatism in this sense. That in a world which seeks progress through the repudiation of accepted truths and the destruction of established institutions, good and bad alike, we mean to conserve the foundations of American life. We mean to hold to the principles born of the accumulated experience of our race. We believe that they are as valid today as yesterday; and that they are fully capable of adaptation to the new problems of a new world.

That a conservative party, fully alive to the needs of the day, but with its roots grounded in the American tradition, can soon become the dominant party, I entertain no doubt. Americans do not favor the destruction of their institutions. Once alive to where the present movement leads them, they will assert their will in no uncertain way.

Even on the basis of the Roosevelt landslide, it would take only a 12 per cent shift in votes to give the opposition a majority—and there are millions who voted for Mr. Roosevelt because of recovery and their faith in him who have no intention to become the subjects of a collectivist state.

The American people of today have no intention of bestowing on the State that divine right of absolutism their forefathers took away from kings so long ago.

The Piper's Pay

By Barnet Nover

Britain's Tribute To Mars.

EVEN NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S own supporters, say reports from London, were left stunned and resentful by his latest budget. Together with most other Englishmen, they had applauded the government's determination to build up Britain's army, navy and air force as rapidly as possible. But when the chancellor of the exchequer proceeds on the assumption that it is not only necessary to have a gigantic rearmament program but also to pay for it the outcry is vociferous.

A few years ago when the international situation was less disturbed than it now is, Great Britain's annual expenditures for national defense were in the vicinity of $550,000,000. This sum could be raised out of the existing taxation. Indeed, during the five and one-half years of Chamberlain's tenure as watchdog of the British treasury, as during most of the preceding decade, it was even possible for the government to set aside certain sums for debt reduction.

• • • •

DURING THE last few years, however, the money devoted to war preparation purposes has steadily risen. At the moment when the Baldwin government decided to embark on its five-year, $7,500,000,000 rearmament program, Great Britain was spending $400,000,000 more for such purposes than it had spent as recently as 1932. And the 1937 estimates for the fighting forces will boost the cost of armaments by half a billion dollars over what it was in 1926.

To meet the staggering costs of the new rearmament program, three courses were open to Chamberlain. In the first place, he could raise the whole of the needed sum by borrowing. Great Britain's credit is excellent and from a purely technical point of view the obstacles in the way of such a course are not overwhelming.

To be sure, such defense loans would, sooner or later, have to be repaid. But more than one government in the world has pursued precisely such a course in dealing with rearmament and has consoled itself with the thought that future generations will be able to foot the bill much more easily than can the present overburdened generation.

• • • •

HOWEVER, SUCH a borrowing program, so far as Great Britain is concerned, would not be without its immediate dangers. Great Britain today is in the midst of a real industrial boom. A succession of huge government loans would only give unneeded and unwanted impetus to the spiral of credit expansion. In the opinion of many British economists, therefore, it would be an extremely unwise step to finance the rearmament program wholly out of loans.

But the second possibility—of meeting the whole cost of that program out of current taxation—is viewed by the government as unwise and dangerous. British taxpayers are already groaning under a huge load of income and other levies. To compel them, during the next five years, to add a new burden, one equivalent to the entire cost to Great Britain of the Boer War, might prove both economically and politically disastrous.

IT WAS a third course which Chamberlain has decided to pursue. Part of the rearmament program, he has now revealed, is to be financed out of borrowing. This sum—approximately $400,000,000 a year for the next five years—will be equivalent, by the time the program has been completed, to the total amount by which the British national debt has been reduced in the period since 1924.

At the same time, the income tax has been boosted so that the normal rate is now 5 shillings on the pound—25 per cent. A new tax designed to curb rearmament profits is also to be imposed. This tax will mean the confiscation of 33 1-3 per cent of the profits made by companies in excess of their average profits during 1933-1935.

By means of this compromise, it is clear, Chamberlain hopes to accomplish two purposes. In the first place, he hopes to pay a good part of the costs of rearmament through current receipts. In the second place, he hopes to curb speculation and inflation without, at the same time, preventing the healthy expansion of industry.

Whether he will succeed in accomplishing these desirable aims remains to be seen. It is by no means certain that Great Britain, having achieved its present rearmament program, will be able to stop there. The presumption behind this program is that it represents the maximum of British efforts in the field of war preparation. But it may actually prove a minimum. That will depend on whether the expansion of the British army, navy and air fleet finally forces the other powers to accept a general limitation of armaments or whether, on the contrary, they view the British program as a challenge to be met in kind.

In the latter case, certainly, Great Britain's present ambitious efforts to rearm will have to be followed by even more ambitious efforts in the future.

• • • •

THE HOPE is that the latter course will not be necessary. The one fact upon which practically all students of international relations are at present agreed on is that the British rearmament program has frightened Germany, Italy and Japan. Those nations are in no position to compete with Great Britain in spending money for unproductive purposes. Yet while that is true it is also true that Great Britain's capacity to pour money down the well is not unlimited.

According to an estimate made by the London Economist a little while ago, Great Britain today is not only spending more money than ever for war preparation but the rate of this spending in relation to the national income is also mounting.

In 1891, for instance, the ratio of defense expenditures to national income was 2 per cent; it rose to 3½ per cent by 1916; by the time the present rearmament program is well under way the ratio will be no less than 6¼ per cent.

This is sheer madness. But in a world of lunatics, the British feel they cannot afford to be sane.

Scholar in Politics

By William Lyon Phelps

Gov. Cross.

His excellency, the Governor of the State of Connecticut, Wilbur L. Cross, now serving his fourth term, with, I hope, his fifth, sixth and seventh to come, leads all the Governors of our 48 States in his knowledge of English literature. When he was an undergraduate at Yale, more than 50 years ago, he was always called by his classmates "Senator;" they seemed to be prescient even then of his career as a statesman. Well, he was school teacher, college professor, dean of the Graduate School of Yale, editor of the Yale Review, and then, by the laws of the university, went into retirement at the age of 68.

• • • •

His retirement lasted about five minutes. He was asked to "run" for Governor. Now, Dr. Cross is deliberate. I have known him intimately for 53 years, and I have never seen him run—not once step. I have never heard him talk rapidly. Every step, every word adagio. When I think of the number of trains I have caught on the run and my own muzzle velocity in oratory, I am astounded at the enormous amount of work accomplished by our philosophical Governor. He lives up to Goethe's motto—without haste and without rest. To the naked eye he always appears stationary. But if you take your eye off him for an hour or so, he has gone far. In every campaign for Governor he has walked away with the prize.

• • • •

He is the scholar in politics, the man of letters as an executive. His State papers have been models of literary style. And now we have some of them in permanent and beautiful form. It was a happy idea of the Prospect Press, of Hartford, Conn., to issue the State papers and proclamations of the Governor in a beautiful volume, a model of typography, paper, and binding. The book is called "Proclamations of Gov. Wilburn L. Cross"—everyone will take delight especially in his brief and exquisite Thanksgiving calls to prayer and praise.

Oshawa Strike

Ottawa Correspondent Sees Hepburn's Tactics In Opposing C. I. O. As Reacting Against Entire Liberal Party In Canada.

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

WITH THE Federal Parliament adjourned since April 10, labor troubles, arising from the efforts of the C. I. O. to obtain a foothold in Canadian industry, now occupy the national spotlight and are causing considerable worry both to employers and governments.

Heretofore the dominating organization in the Canadian labor world has been the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, a body which has always had close ties and interlocking relations with the American Federation of Labor. Its leading officials have been the same stamp of men as the A. F. of L.'s executives. They have consistently pursued the same sort of cautious policy—frowning upon any attempts to form a political labor party and making no efforts to organize unskilled labor. They have not, however, had a monopoly of the field. There exists a Canadian National Labor Congress, whose members pride themselves on the freedom from American entanglements. In addition, in Quebec there are a series of tame Catholic labor organizations which are largely controlled by the priests.

International Links Decided C. I. O. Action.

MR. LEWIS and his lieutenants evidently reached the conclusion some time ago that owing to the intertwined relations of Canadian and American industry they could not hope to consolidate effectively their gains in the United States unless they were able to establish their organization in Canada. So, for some time past C. I. O. organizers have been busy in the iron and steel, the textile and automobile industries of Canada. Helped by the success which they have achieved in the United States, they have made considerable headway in enlisting recruits.

However, soon after the workers formed their union they submitted a demand for a 40-hour week, better wages and improved working conditions and negotiations with the company's executives. But when the union put forward Mr. Thompson as one of its delegates the company refused to proceed further with the negotiations unless he was dropped as a delegate.

The men refused to do this and, having noted a pronouncement of the Federal Ministers of Justice that "sit-down strikes" were illegal in Canada and would not be tolerated, simply walked out of the plants one morning and went on strike, insisting that they would not resume negotiations until Mr. Thompson was accepted as one of their spokesmen and their union formally recognized.

Hepburn Interfered In Ottawa Mediation.

In CANADA the federal government under the authority of the industrial disputes investigation act usually intervenes in such disputes with an offer of mediation. If both parties are agreeable a conciliation board is set up. It was moving to do so in this case when suddenly Mitchell Hepburn, the Liberal Premier of Ontario, jumped into the fray and Ottawa held its hand.

Hepburn is a lively young politician who won considerable prestige three years ago by leading the provincial Liberals of Ontario back to power after 30 years' exclusion from the sweets of office. He has therefore become one of the heroes of his party. He has shown considerable courage on various issues such as the famous controversy with a group of power corporations in Quebec whose contracts with the Hydro-Commission of Ontario he canceled arbitrarily. But his courage has sometimes borne all the earmarks of misguided rashness and he has come to be regarded by most intelligent Canadians as a brash young man who has a very imperfect understanding of the fundamentals of economics and politics.

On this occasion, professing the role of mediator, he emerged as a violent partisan of General Motors and proceeded, while intimating his desire to settle the strike and his determination to maintain law and order, to denounce John Lewis and his C. I. O. as dangerous elements marching hand in hand with the Communists. He further upbraided the workers of Oshawa for being misled by paid foreign agitators.

When he summoned representatives of both sides to a conference at Toronto, he had first a discussion with the executives and then declared that he would only confer with the spokesmen of the workers if they excluded Mr. Thompson. This they naturally declined to do. Meanwhile, Mr. Hepburn had sent to Oshawa special provincial police. He also induced the federal government to send there a detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, which it dispatched with some misgivings as there had been no sign of any riots or disturbance.

Resignations Required From Two Ontario Ministers.

MR. HEPBURN, however, had not a unanimous cabinet behind him.

His Attorney General, Mr. Roebuck, and his Minister of Labor, Mr. Croll, made known their dissent from his attitude on the ground that it was inconsistent with the principles of the Liberal party in regard to labor problems. Apparently Mr. Croll had promised the strikers unemployment relief while they were out of work and Mr. Hepburn declined to countenance any such policy.

Then on Wednesday he surprised the two dissenting ministers by summarily demanding their resignations on the plea that he must have cabinet solidarity on the gravest issue that had confronted Ontario for many a long day. They submitted them in dignified letters which stated their objections to his policy and argued that the right of the working classes to organize as they saw fit had always been accepted as one of the fundamental doctrines of Canadian Liberalism. The contents and tone of their letters were well received by the public at large and hardened opinion against Mr. Hepburn. This did not improve his temper.

He proceeded to issue further denunciations of the strikers and the C. I. O. and also to pick a quite needless quarrel with the federal government, which, while intimating its willingness to mediate if required, had been preserving an attitude of careful neutrality. Mr. Hepburn announced that the federal government had agreed to stand behind his policy with all its resources. As the latter had no desire to find itself maneuvered into a position which would alienate the whole labor vote of Canada, Mr. Mackenzie, the Minister of National Defense, promptly issued a denial that any such promise had been made. To this Mr. Hepburn retorted that exactly such a promise had been made by Mr. Mackenzie himself at a luncheon in Toronto in the presence of two witnesses and at the same time he demanded that the federal government as it had broken its word, must withdraw its mounted police from Oshawa and leave him to handle the business.

The federal government has complied with this request and left Mr. Hepburn to handle the mess which he has created.

Employers Back Hepburn But Public Opinion Differs.

UNDOUBTEDLY the great majority of Canadian employers are wholly sympathetic to Hepburn's stand because they dread a strong C. I. O. in Canada and think they are faced with a serious threat to the stability of their labor relations. But moderate, disinterested opinion has come to take the view that it is strangely inconsistent and incongruous for a Liberal Premier to take openly the side of the Canadian subsidiary of a great American corporation against the demands of Canadian workers for recognition of union of their own choosing simply because it is of American origin. It is also being pointed out that for years Canadian corporations have been in the habit of dealing with trade unions which had close affiliations with American unions and that when certain Canadian firms recently made agreements with unions affiliated to the C. I. O. Mr. Hepburn made no protest.

Retreat from his position is now very difficult for the Premier of Ontario, but whether he effects it or not, the damage which he has already done to the fortunes of the Liberal party of Canada will not be easily repaired as long as he remains a prominent member of it. Ministers at Ottawa are sadly aware of this fact and are privately cursing his rash interference. Meanwhile the Oshawa strike has caused a serious dislocation of Canadian industry in various directions, as not only has General Motors shut down its plant at Windsor, Ontario, but a number of firms which make necessary parts have felt it necessary to suspend operations.

Suicide in Tub Ends 30 Years Of Melancholy

Mrs. Julia T. Waterman, 69, Takes Sleeping Potion Before Drowning.

Thirty years of melancholy ended yesterday for Mrs. Julia Turner Waterman, 69, when she drowned herself in the bathtub of her small apartment at 2123 California street northwest.

Mrs. Waterman's body was discovered by Leo G. Sheridan, manager of the Brighton Hotel, where she had lived since her return from Europe last January.

A note was found in the rooms. It said: "Good-by, heart of mine. Good-by, mother." It was unsigned.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. He said Mrs. Waterman apparently had taken a strong dose of sleeping medicine before getting in the water.

Sheridan told police that roomers in an adjoining apartment had heard water running in the Waterman rooms about 2:30 a. m.

George Y. Worthington, jr., 2122 LeRoy place northwest, son-in-law of Mrs. Waterman and a prominent local real estate man, said his wife had brought Mrs. Waterman back to this country from Paris in January.

Mrs. Waterman had spent most of her life in Europe following death of her husband in Cape Town, South Africa, about 30 years ago.

Mrs. Worthington said her mother had been melancholy since her father's death, and she was brought here in the hope that a change might be effected.

A sister, Mrs. Hedley Cook, of this city; a brother, Campbell Turner, of Alexandria, Va., and two other sisters also survive.

The youth had been active in basketball and soccer in the high school, from which he was graduated last year. He was a member of the Browningsville Band and active in the Damacus chapter of the Future Farmers of America. Besides his father, he is survived by a brother, Clyde Warfield; a half-sister, Miss Dorothy May Warfield; his stepmother, Mrs. Dorothy Warfield. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the residence followed by burial in Mount Lebanon Cemetery.

Mrs. Maria Tilton Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Maria J. Tilton, 79, widow of P. G. Tilton, veteran of the Union Army in the Civil War, will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charlton W. Ingram, 4908 Kansas avenue northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mrs. Tilton died at the Kansas avenue address Monday after a long illness. Her husband who died in 1913, served for many years as an employe of the Woodward & Lothrop Store.

Mrs. Tilton was a member of Grant Circle of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and belonged, for nearly half century, to the Calvary Baptist Church. Besides her daughter, she is survived by two grandchildren.

Funeral Is Sunday For Mrs. Staples

Mrs. Rebecca Bullard Staples, sister of Mrs. W. W. Husband, of 3456 Macomb street northwest, died at her home, Crafts del Navajo, Coolidge, N. Mex., April 14. Mrs. Husband has been at Coolidge for the last three weeks.

Mrs. Staples was born at St. Johnsburg, Vt., where the funeral will be held Sunday afternoon. She had lived many years in New Mexico and, with her husband, Berton I. Staples, had been engaged in the promotion and improvement of the native arts and crafts of the Navajo Indians.

The late Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, spent several summers at Crafts del Navajo and her book Mesa Land, was written there. Mrs. Staples was an occasional visitor in Washington and had many friends here.

Understanding Held Real Need In Social Jobs

More Christian Spirit Is Vital, Mrs. Sibley Tells Travelers' Aid.

Need for more Christian understanding of the problems of the underprivileged by social workers, both volunteer and professional, and contributors of money was emphasized by Mrs. Harper Sibley, principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Washington Travelers Aid Society, held yesterday at the Burlington Hotel. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the local Travelers Aid, introduced Mrs. Sibley, this portion of the program being broadcast over Station WRC.

Mrs. Sibley paid high tribute to the work of the society, citing instances of assistance. She referred particularly to a conversation with a mother, whose daughter had disappeared. Police had tried to find her, but in vain. The Travelers Aid Society located her within 12 hours. She told of her first volunteer social work as chairman of the Travelers Aid committee of the Rochester (N. Y.) Young Women's Christian Association.

The great need today, Mrs. Sibley declared, is to devise a method by which the givers will remain conscious of their responsibility to help beyond just giving dollars. She disparaged the people who give or serve simply for the purpose of having their gifts or work acknowledged publicly. She told of the need of trained workers to handle the welfare situation as only trained workers can handle it.

She declared that there must be a basis of Christian responsibility back of the performance of every task and said that "social workers must give more than they are paid to give. They must have an understanding of the needs of people and must strive to meet these needs rather than to just hold a job."

Mrs. Margaret Ford, executive secretary, gave a short report on the work of the society for the past year, outlining cases of some of the more than 26,000 people who were aided during the year. Mrs. Leonora B. Coit, night worker at the Union Station, told of a number of cases handled during the year.

Fisheries Bureau Films Are Shown

Several reels of motion pictures, showing conservation work of the Bureau of Fisheries, were shown to 750 people in the Department of Commerce auditorium last night.

Gus Hill, Ex-Star Of Minstrels, Dies

New York, April 21 (AP).—Gus Hill, famous minstrel man and Broadway producer of other days, died last night. He was 79.

One of Broadway's best known personalities, Hill was the discoverer of such personalities as Fred Stone, Sophie Tucker, Ben Turpin, Bert Wheeler and arry Richman.

In his early days he played in minstrels with Weber and Field. Later he gave his attention to vaudeville and burlesque. Only a year ago Hill performed his famous club-swinging act at the Lambs Club gambol.

Value Expert Is Witness at TransitHearing

C. M. Gray, operating engineer for the St. Louis Street Car Co. and an expert on depreciation, declared yesterday the Capital Transit Co.'s street cars are now worth 67.8 per cent and its buses 83.2 per cent of their new value.

He testified at the afternoon session of the Public Utilities Commission hearing into the value of the transsit company's property. The hearing, recessed over the weekend, was resumed yesterday morning.

In the morning J. A. Thirlwall, General Electric Co. equipment engineer, was brought into the session as an expert witness for the transit company. Through him S. R. Bowen, company attorney, sought to prove street-car equipment here is on a par with that in other cities.

At the request of Hinman D. Folsom, commission attorney, however, the comparisons with other cities were stricken from the record.

Bowen then asked whether it would involve waste of capital for the company to replace its oldest cars, now used only during rush periods, with new cars.

Thereupon the witness discussed comparative costs of operation of old and new cars. He stated the cost of operation of a new car was $4.690, and of an old car, $5.350.

These figures were based on an assumption that the new cars have a speed of 12.5 miles an hour as compared with 10 miles an hour for the older cars.

So that members of the commission may testify today before the House sub-committee of the District Appropriations Committee, there will be no utilities commission session today.

Hearings will be resumed tomorrow and will continue, it is expected, for about another week. Shortly thereafter a rate hearing will be held at which the P. U. C. will rule on the Capital Transit Co.'s request for increased token fares.

Morgan Rites Are Scheduled At St. Thomas

Funeral services for W. Forbes Morgan, retired president of the Distilled Spirits Institute and former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, who died early yesterday in Columbus, Ohio, will be held in St. Thomas Episcopal Church here at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The body of the 57-year-old investment banker, drafted to handle the finances of the Democratic Party's 1936 campaign, then will be taken to his ancestral home at Tivoli, N. Y., for burial Saturday.

Morgan's death, which occurred during a hearing in the Ohio capital, came as a surprise to his former political associates.

He was married in 1904 to Edith Livingston Hall, who died in 1920. A son, William Forbes Morgan, jr., survives him, as does his wife by his second marriage, Sarah Jackson Coonley, of Concord, N. H.

Commenting on Morgan's death last night, Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said:

"A true and loyal friend and a great executive was lost to the world when W. Forbes Morgan died.

"I can say without hesitation that he was the most generally loved member of the Democratic organization, and his passing leaves a great gap in the close-knit brotherhood that directed the political activities of the Democratic Party, and of Franklin D. Roosevelt in particular, for the last five years."

One of the most wonderful gifts us humans have is the power of imagination. Of course, it can be a terrible thing if we let it turn against us, because it can sure bring a lotta worry, but if we learn to control it, it is the greatest weapon we can have against boredom.

I use'ta feel so sorry for my Cousin Dillard because he lived way back in the hills where there was nothin' to see and nothin' to do and I often wondered how he kept so happy. One day I saw him fishin' in a little mud puddle and I says "What in the world are you fishin' for?" and he says "Oh, I know it—there ain't no fish in there either, but I might as well make it exciting."

Notes.

Rapidly now employes on the south side of Agriculture's South Building are losing their landscape that long rested their eyes . . . This landscape consisted of a long, green flatland, that was fixed with blooming cherry trees of late; and a river that was silver and curved, and beyond the river the hazy distances of Virginia . . . Now a new building goes up, smack into the faces of the employes, and they rapidly lose their landscape now and comments are heard about it daily . . . The new building is for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and people at work on its growing sides make a terrific noise with hammers and saws . . . "I'm thinking of the landscape, and I'm thinking, too, of the great heat that new building will cast into this office," said a girl with red fingernails yesterday . . .

While other men weigh their little troubles, a group of scientists in the Bureau of Standards are weighing the earth, and with great pains against making errors . . . Peter Chrzanowski and others of them use delicate and precise instruments that are sealed in a partial vacuum, read with telescopes and housed in Washington's all-steel welded building . . . It is a feat not often attempted . . . So sensitive are some of the instruments that measurements are made from a distance of 18 feet . . .

On April 30 the retirement of John H. Cook as clerk in the chief clerk's division of the Veterans' Administration becomes effective and the service loses another of the fast-thinning ranks of the old Bureau of Pensions . . . He was appointed on January 12, 1891, through Civil Service from St Paul, Minn; began service in the Pension Office files, and during the 46 years of continuous service has held the positions of chief of section, assistant to the chief of the division and chief of the entire pension files system . . . He has served in the Record Division, now the Pension Index Section . . . They have given him a big bunch of roses, a clock with chimes and their good wishes . . .

Newly organized and active, Motor Carriers Lodge, No 349, A. F. G. E., has worked out a most amazing piece of sales-talk for their lodge . . . It is titled "A Pilgrim Treks to Mosque El-Kappa-Tol," and deals with the end that comes to a lone wolf . . . An appended moral says: "Don't be a slave of tradition . . . howling a lone lament . . . Speak through your official voice, the American Federation of Government Employes . . . W. M. Hiley is one of the active heads of this lodge . . . Assisting him are A. J. Ormond, C. P. Morris, Anna Hennessy, Jean Y. Handy, Earl J. DeMuth and Virginia Shepherd. . . .

Something attracting a great tourist interest these days is the bright row of flowers on the Fourteenth street side of the Government greenhouses, just off Constitution avenue . . . Soon they'll be on the river bank now, throwing out hooks for the herring and striped bass that annually come up the stream . . . The Bureau of Fisheries expect the run within a week or ten days . . . Some time ago an employe in Southern California wrote in, looking for someone to swap jobs with him . . . He was eager to swap his job in the much-ballyhooed southern California climate for a place in Washington's much-cussed climate . . . But so far there have been no customers, although his proposition was given fair publicity. . . .

Robert Catherwood, former president of the National Civil Service Reform League and a writer and lecturer on personnel administration, has given hearty approval to the extension of the merit system in the Federal Civil Service, as was recommended by the President to Congress. But, he warned, "there are dangers inherent in the proposal to create a single administrator to be responsible to and hold office at the pleasure of the President

"Even if the proposed administrator were chosen by open competition, as provided in the Brownlow report, he would still be liable to dismissal at the President's will, without one of the basic safeguards of a true merit system—the right to demand definite charges and a hearing on them," Catherwood said. "It is too much to expect that, with the axe of dismissal held over his head, any but the strongest and most impregnable character would be immune to 'suggestions' or to direct or indirect influence," he said.

"It would be more than possible that at some future time, when jobs are wanted for distribution, the White House might speak to the administrator and the administrator might oblige with seemingly decorous procedure and softening veils."

House Gets D. C. Utilities Tax Measure

Would Repeal District Assessments Against Capital, Stocks.

By James D. Secrest.

A bill imposing a $1.50 tax on every $100 tangible personal property of all public utilities in Washington was introduced in the House yesterday as a substitute for present levies on earnings.

The ninth and final of a series of local tax measures, it was offered by Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, who estimated that it will raise $950,000 in excess of current revenue from the utilities.

Assessments on personal tangible property would be on the basis of "true cash value" and would include all equipment used in utility operations. Real estate levies would continue as at present, but the bill makes no provision for an intangible personal property tax on utility capital or stocks.

Would Repeal Old Tax.

Collins explained that his income tax bill, previously introduced, repeals the intangible personal property tax.

The tax proposal was offered as the Kennedy sub-committee of the House District Committee prepared to resume hearings at 10 a. m. today on local tax measures with members of the Public Utilities Commission as the major witnesses.

The Collins tax probably will be discussed at the hearing, but last night members of the commission declined to comment on it until they had time to calculate its revenue-raising possibilities with the present special taxes on each major utility.

Chairman Kennedy yesterday, in discussing the opening hearing of his sub-committee, stated that he is favorably impressed with the 1929 proposal of the Brookings Institution that a city manager form of government be adopted in place of the present three-man commission.

Citizens' Council Proposed.

He also would adopt one of the suggestions of the Jacobs committee and set up an advisory council of citizens who would select the city manager. Kennedy believes this council should be elected by popular vote, but be unpaid.

The question of reform in the District government will not be considered by the legislative sub-committee, however, until after the major revenue problems are solved. It is likely that Kennedy's group will await the intial report of the committee of citizens headed by E. Barrett Prettyman.

Collins' public utility tax bill, which has been several weeks in preparation and revision, specifies generally what shall be considered tangible personal property.

It shall include, the bill states, rights of way, street and interurban cars, rolling stock, tracks, telephone poles, wires, conduits, switchboards, engines, dynamos, boilers, office furnishings and equipment.

Inspection Provided.

The District tax assessor is accorded broad authority to inspect both the property and the books of the public utilities and is authorized to make a survey by experts for which the measure proposes an appropriation of $10,000. The experts would be appointed without regard to civil service laws.

A board of review is set up by the bill to hear appeals from assessments on the utilities. It consists of the president of the Board of Commissioners, members of the Public Utilities Commission and the District auditor.

Penalties of $300 a day are provided for failure to file personal property returns and $500 for refusal to allow the assessor to examine property and accounts.

In case of the failure of the utilities to pay tax levies, the tax would constitute a lien on the property, the bill states.

Pay $1,500,000.

At present the major public utilities pay more than $1,500,000 a year in taxes on receipts and real estate.

In 1936 the receipts levies amounted to $1,350,808 and the realty levies to $294,885.

The breakdown among the four major companies is as follows:

Washington Gas Light Co., $259,099 on basis of 5 per cent of gross earnings and $62,900 on real estate.

Potomac Electric Power Co., $434,537 on basis of 4 per cent of gross earnings and $103,400 on real estate.

Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., $348,858 from 4 per cent tax on gross earnings and $7',300 on land and buildings.

Capital Transit Co., $308,314 on gross receipts and $57,285 (including Washington Rapid Transit Co.) on real estate.

Short Story Winners.

Prize winners for the short-story contest conducted by the Community Center Department were announced yesterday. Miss Julia Dean Hoopes, of the Southeast Community Center, won first prize with her story, "What They Don't Know." Clyde Manacheck was given second place, and Pearl Goldenberg, third. More than 25 manuscripts were submitted by various amateur writing groups.

School Teacher Sobs at Trial For Blackmail

Breakdown Shocks Court After 'Grimaces' at U. S. Prosecutor.

Sobs came yesterday from Mrs. Mary Krieger, comely former Oklahoma school teacher, as she heard a detective sergeant testify in District Supreme Court that she had offered to testify against Samuel L. Frooks, on trial with her on blackmail charges.

Mrs. Krieger's breakdown surprised the courtroom because on Tuesday, the first day of her trial, she had been accused by Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb of "making faces and grimaces at him and at the jury."

The sobs broke out when Mrs. Krieger heard Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman testify she had declared that Frooks, a former candidate for the House of Representatives from New York State, was "a rat" and that she had "enough on him to send him away."

Statement Introduced.

The second day of the Government's efforts to prove Frooks and Mrs. Krieger had attempted to extort money from 65-year-old Carroll Pierce, deceased president of the Alexandria Citizens National Bank, was also featured by the introduction into testimony of a statement Mrs. Krieger had dictated shortly after her arrest in September, 1936.

The statement, read by Robb, outlined her acquaintanceship with Pierce and mentioned intimacy with the late Alexandria banker.

It quoted the blonde former school teacher as saying Pierce had promised her a lifetime job in his bank at $175 a month. She was to have been a "contact lady."

"Old School Gentleman."

Her statement said: "I respected and liked Mr. Pierce very much. He was refined and a gentleman of the old school until he got drunk." It pointed out also: "Every time I have accepted money it has been thrust upon me."

The statement told further how Mrs. Krieger had met Pierce in the club car of a California-Washington train and had next seen him after renting a safe deposit box in the Alexandria bank which Pierce headed. The couple afterward met in Mrs. Krieger's Washington apartment and in an inn near the city.

Berthold N. Colle, an inn proprietor, testified that Mrs. Krieger had once asked his aid in selling $100,000 in bonds to Pierce. Colle said Mrs. Krieger told him she couldn't sell them directly to a bank because they "came from Dutch Schultz."

Downham Testifies.

Other witnesses yesterday were George F. Downham, vice president of Pierce's bank, and Private Green, of the Metropolitan Police Department. Downham said he had seen Mrs. Krieger and Pierce in conference several times, and Green told of having helped to install the microphone in the hotel room where Frooks, a few hours before his arrest, met with Pierce's attorney, M. Carter Hall.

The last Government witness yesterday was Assistant United States Charles B. Murray, who said that "to the best of his judgment" Mrs. Krieger was the same woman who called at his office November 29. The court adjourned as Robb attempted to get Murray to identify a statement signed by the November 29 caller. Robb will attempt to introduce the statement into testimony when the case continues today.

Budget Bureau Delays Grant For Jobless Aid

Hope for immediate relief of Washington's 3,000 unemployed was further dimmed yesterday when Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, declared the needed deficiency appropriation of $130,000 cannot possibly be approved by the Bureau of the Budget and Congress before May 1.

That appropriation, requested two weeks ago, had been planned for the relief of the District's unemployed employables during the months of May and June. "It now reposes," said Street, "in the Bureau of the Budget, neither approved nor disapproved."

Meanwhile, the Board of Public Welfare continues in the task of hiring personnel from the civil service rolls who will certify unemployed employables for WPA work relief.

Street recalled that relief for unemployables had been considerably reduced April 1. The fuel allowance was withdrawn, and because of a shortage of funds there had been a cut of 10 to 15 per cent in the allowance made for other living expenses.

He also said cases of the "direct-emergency" type were being cared for out of $30,000 scraped some weeks ago from the unemployable fund. This sum is being portioned out at the rate of $10,000 a month.

Earlier in the day the $1,000,000 unemployed relief fund, which the Citizens Committee asked be included in next year's budget, was assailed by the Washington Board of Trade.

In a resolution adopted April 12 and yesterday sent to the Commissioners, the board said:

"The directors of the Washington Board of Trade view with concern the rise in the cost of relief in the District of Columbia and now believe the time is at hand when every effort to lessen expenditures for relief purposes, as employment in the District increases, should be made, and it therefore cannot approve the request that an additional $1,000,000 for 1938 be appropriated."

Red Rider Is Called 'Insult' To Teachers of Washington

The dormant "red-rider" issue burst into discussion again last night when Henry I. Quinn, member of the Board of Education, told the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association it was an "insult" to the teachers of the District.

The association had gathered to pay honor to him and to Gratz Dunkham, newly appointed member of the board.

"Would you," he demanded, "insult Congressmen by legislating against communistic discussion on the floor of the House of Representatives, or in the Senate? That sort of insult has been thrown at our teachers.

"The Board of Education," he added, "will, however, stand solidly behind them. We call upon you to do likewise."

Quinn also declared freedom of curricula enabled teachers to use "the very effective method of contrast."

"For example, when modern European governments are taught, the teacher indicates they are dictatorships, and that under them a bill of rights and freedom of speech are missing," he said.

"There is consequently instilled into the children a finer appreciation of the principles of Americanism."

In his talk, which preceded Quinn's, Dunkham discussed the function of the public schools.

Bill Attacks Civil Service Jobs Rating

Would Base Government Promotions Upon 'Satisfactory Work.'

Make U. S. Department Heads Employes' Judges in Fixing Pay.

Abolition of the uniform system of efficiency rating in the Government service and substitution of a promotion scheme based on "satisfactory service" are proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia.

The measure seeks to amend sections 7 and 9 of the classification act of 1923.

It states upon passage of the act it shall no longer be mandatory for departments to operate and the Civil Service Commission to review the uniform system of efficiency rating.

The sole basis for determining salaray rates within a grade, it states, shall be a determination by a department head that an employe "has rendered satisfactory service."

Promotion Automatic.

Unless an employe is rated affirmatively as "unsatisfactory," he shall be entitled to automatic promotion each year until he attains the highest rating within a grade.

After five years of satisfactory service at the highest rate of pay within a grade, an employe shall be entitled automatically to a pay raise of $100 a year.

Another $100 raise would be forthcoming after another ten years' service and would be repeated each ten years during the employe's service.

Promotion for an employe who has had less than 20 years' service after reaching the highest rate of pay within his grade is made possible by a provision for noncompetitive examinations.

Upon passage of this test the employe's name would be placed on a regular register for promotion into the next highest grade whenever vacancies occur.

Bill Exempts Some.

The Government Printing Office and the Foreign Service are specifically exempted from provisions of the bill, which would apply otherwise to all Government employes in Washington and in the field.

A similar bill is still pending before the Senate Civil Service Committee, having been introduced by Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada. It is being held up, however, upon request of the Budget Bureau because a survey is being made of the whole governmental classification system by direction of the President.

Motorcyclist Cut Badly in Collision

Jesse L. Bell, 19, of 3823 Twenty-fifth place northeast, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when a motorcycle he was riding crashed into an automobile at Twenty-fourth and Otis streets northeast.

Bell was riding north on Twenty-fourth street when his machine collided with a car operated by Clinton F. Waters, 30, Mount Rainier, Md.

At Sibley Hospital Bell was said to have severe cuts to his hands, legs and scalp. He was admitted for treatment.

A coroner's jury yesterday held under the negligent homicide act, Paul Leon Courtenay, 17, of the 400 block I street northwest, after an inquest in the death of Joseph A. Bell, 78, colored, 1141 Twenty-third street northwest.

Bell was struck as he walked across P street at Twenty-sixth Tuesday night. He died in Emergency Hospital. His death was the fortieth fatality this year.

50 Years With Government Today

SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Gompers, 50 Years in Service Today, Keeps Opinions to Self

Son of Famed Labor Leader, on Anniversary, Plans Trip—for Business; Blames Labor Unrest on Depression.

Samuel Gompers, son of labor's Samuel Gompers, today will observe the fiftieth anniversary of his service with the United States Government. Not a great many people observe a golden anniversary of service with one employer, but when they do they generally have a vast store of reminiscences and an equal number of ideas about how the employer should run his business, if not, indeed, about how the world, itself, might be saved.

If the son of Labor's Samuel Gompers has any such reminiscences or notions he isn't free with them. He was interviewed yesterday and asked such things as these, such things as a person who has been 50 years in one employ would bubble over on:

"What changes in the Government in 50 years have impressed you the most?"

"What would your father—you knew him well, of course, think of the current labor situation?"

Attitude Is Neutral.

Gompers, his desk piled high with current work and fixed with a motto that reminded him to be kind under all circumstances, said: "Gentlemen, don't ask me that. I work for the Labor Department, and my attitude must be neutral. But about what you describe as this labor unrest . . . I know you've got Green and Lewis and the rest of them in the backs of your heads . . . There always comes unrest when the country is recovering from a depression . . . In the depression's depths there is poverty, no hope, of course . . . People come up out of the depressions and the hope of it all brings desires . . . But I can't discuss it all . . . But I want you to know that I have my own personal opinions which must be kept . . ."

He said he was impressed by the expansions both in the City of Washington and in the Government service. And he was willing enough to trace his own career, but seemed unwilling to make anything of it other than a cut-and-dried matter of dates and promotion facts.

Likes His Job.

After 50 years, the flattest record takes color to most men who served those years, but to Gompers his 50 years were called up like this:

"On April 22, 1887, I entered the Government Printing Office as a compositor . . . This was during Cleveland's first administration . . . I worked in various capacities for 20 years, then took the Civil Service examination and was appointed to the Department of Commerce and Labor . . . I worked there in the Division of Publications and with the Census . . . With the creation of the Department of Labor, I was made chief of the Division of Publication and Supplies . . . In 1918 I was appointed chief clerk and have served under four Secretaries, Wilson, Davis, Doak and Perkins.

"No, I'm not planning a celebration of any kind for the day . . . On Saturday I've got to take a trip, but that is in connection with business; has nothing to do with the anniversary . . . But you know, one thing occurs to me now . . . If I were a wealthy man I would want nothing better to occupy my time and mind than this job I've got . . . That's what I think of it."

Parsons Assails Parole Practices

Condemning contemporary methods of criminal parole and probation, Herbert Parsons, an authority of long standing on the subject, last night told the Washington Hygiene Forum, in All Souls Church, it is "bad to apply remedial measures merely for the deed.

"We should lead the criminal out into a better line of conduct toward society and his fellow human beings. "Psychiatry," he added, "has made progress—the insane asylum has become a hospital. The prison, however, still remains a prison."

School Board Studies Pay In Cafeterias

Raises for 100 or More Workers Weighed at Session.

Pay raises for 100 to 200 women employed in public school cafeterias are under consideration by the Board of Education pending a ruling from Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal on the effect of the District's minimum wage law.

Acting on the recommendation of Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, the board yesterday voted to seek the counsel's advice before discussing the matter further.

School officials said they were not sure about the status of these workers, hired to prepare cafeteria lunches for pupils in more than 30 junior and senior high schools, as well as in a half dozen vocational schools.

It was explained each cafeteria is operated "independently." The school principal in a building with a cafeteria engages a manager to operate the lunch room on a self-sustaining basis. The manager in turn hires helpers to prepare and serve meals.

Money in Special Fund.

Since no public moneys are involved it was pointed out yesterday that a minimum wage law ruling, one way or the other, would have no effect in appropriations.

Should it be necessary to pay the women workers—and almost all of the cafeteria helpers are women—the minimum wage required by District law there would be raises for a majority, one official said.

Dr. Harvey A. Smith, assistant superintendent of schools, said many of the women are hired for only part time.

Mauer Vice President.

Some work only a couple of hours at noon time. Others put in three and four hours a day. Many total about 30 hours a week, he said.

As the board took up the minimum wage problem it announced a ruling from the Bureau of Internal Revenue that the same cafeteria employes' wages are not subject to taxes imposed under provisions of the social security act. The Bureau explained that the nature of the cafeteria set up exempted the school board from including the cafeteria employes in social security benefits.

Robert A. Maurer, sr., chairman of the board's personnel committee, was yesterday elected vice president of the board, succeeding Henry Gilligan, who resigned. George M. Whitwell was first placed in nomination, but declined. Whitwell has announced he will not accept reappointment when his present term expires June 30.

C. A. R.'s Rites In D. C. Honor Heroes of '76

Wreath Laid at Capitol; Delegates Have Dance, Other Events.

The rites, in which youngsters eulogized the soldiers who fought for American independence, constituted one of the most colorful events on the second day of the society's forty-second annual convention.

Last night the delegates attended a reception and dance at the Washington Club, their hosts being Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the mint.

Gavel Presented.

At the morning session junior officers presented their reports and a gavel was presented to the society by Lyrlene Carn, of South Carolina. The gavel was made by 12-year-old Joe Lawrence, holder of one of the society's Tamassee scholarships.

The souvenir is fashioned of wood from the South Carolina tree under which Gen. Andrew Pickens was killed by Indians in 1817.

Junior Officers Lunch.

A luncheon for junior officers was held at the Little Scout House. The group sang "Home Sweet Home" in memory of John Barton Payne, the composer, who was inspired by the house of which the Little Scout House is a reproduction.

Included among the young members who laid wreaths on the soldiers' statues at the Capitol and who delivered brief eulogies were William Frank Thompson, of Pennsylvania; Genevieve Goodyear and Elizabeth Dodd, of Georgia; Marianne Layton, of Delaware; Marilyn Lowry, of Tennessee; Annabelle Spence, of New Hampshire, and Oliver Burdick, of New York.

aitresses Told Jobs Are Secure

A mass meeting of 300 local waitresses last night was assured by labor officials that recent Supreme Court minimum wage decisions would not mean their replacemer.t by men.

Anna Neary, American Federation of Labor agent, urged the waitresses to organize first and let minimum wages follow. There isn't anything accomplished without organization," she declared.

Both Mary Anderson, of the Labor Department Women's Bureau, and Mrs. Agnes King, president of the Women's Trade Union League, expressed the belief that minimum wages for women would not cause their replacement by male workers.

Another speaker was Edward Flore, international president of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Alliance. Presiding at the meeting was Mrs. Mabel Norman, former Willard Coffee Shop waitress whose discharge provoked a sit-down strike and a Natior.al Labor Relations Board hearing.

Dr. Willard Addresses Alumni of Illinois U.

Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard was the principal speaker last night at a banquet given by the University of Illinois Alumni Association at the Cosmos Club. He discussed the problems of American institutions of higher learning today.

reports. The battle of ballots, which may develop today when seven vice presidents general and one honorary vice president general are elected, was scarcely considered as members of the D. A. R. proudly discussed the staunch stand they took on the President's proposed court plan.

Even Mrs. Roosevelt's reception yesterday afternoon seemed to be forgotten as women who shook hands with her at the White House less than two hours before, congratulated each other at last night's meeting on their vote in opposition to the President's proposal for enlarging the Supreme Court.

Favors Junior Chapter.

Emphasizing the importance of Mrs. Pouch's statements, Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, urged that "whenever possible, we must organize junior chapters on college campuses."

Two speakers at the morning session stressed youth's stake in the modern world. One of these implied youth's future depends largely "on the women of today." George E. Sokolsky, writer, lecturer and traveler, told his audience that "only the women of your generation can restore the leadership of church, state and family to befuddled modern youth. The role of the modern woman," he continued, "must be the role of preserving the Government for the welfare of future generations."

Arising to the occasion, Mrs. Becker accepted "the challenge as the speaker has just expressed it. We shall do our best," she promised.

With "Religion and the New Generation" as her topic, Mrs. Harper Sibley, chairman of the women's committee for the mobilization of human needs, broke down barriers between nations in pointing out the relationship between internationalism and religion of modern youth.

Balloting Begins Today.

With three full-length sessions scheduled for today, delegates will begin voting at 8 o'clock this morning when polls will open in Memorial Continental Hall. Eleven candidates were nominated last night for the seven places to be filled with vice presidents general. One of the two women nominated for honorary vice president general will be the acclaimed winner when election returns are announced at the meeting tonight.

Candidates for vice presidents general and the name of the person who nominated each are as follows: Mrs. G. B. Averill, of Milwaukee, Wis., by Mrs. James F. Trottman, also of Milwaulkee; Mrs. W. H. Belk, of Charlotte, N. C., by Mrs. Ralph Van Landingham, former vice president general of North Carolina; Mrs. J. H. Cary, of Kearney, Nebr., by Mrs. Frank W. Baker, State regent of Nebraska; Mrs. F. M. Dick, of Cambridge, Md., by Mrs. Ralph Ledmum, Maryland; Miss Bonnie Farwell, Terre Haute, Ind., by Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne, vice president general, Indiana; Mrs. G. M. Grimes, Washington, D. C., by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the District of Columbia; Mrs. C. E. Head, Seattle, Wash., by Mrs. Samuel H. MacDonald, Washington; Mrs. G. Hogg, of Lewisburg, W. Va., by Mrs. William Vaught, former vice president general, West Virginia; Mrs. R. K. Minson, of Tempe, Ariz., by Mrs. Chester S. McMartin, State regent of Arizona; Mrs. M. C. Turner, of Texas, by Mrs. Alvin V. Lane, honorary vice president general, of Texas; Mrs. E. H. Witaker, Pasadena, Calif., by Mrs. Joseph T. Young, State regent of California.

Five Seek in Vain To Block Divorce Of Mrs. Simpson

London, April 21 (U.P.).—Five persons have tried, and failed, during the last few days to block Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's final divorce decree and prevent her marriage to the Duke of Windsor, the King's proctor revealed tonight.

The unidentified would-be interveners reportedly brought evidence purporting to prove that England's divorce laws were violated and that the American divorcee should not receive her decree from Ernest Simpson on May 3.

Persons objecting May appear up to April 27, when the six-month decree nisi period ends. Sir Thomas Barnes, the King's proctor, dismissed each case on grounds that the evidence was not sufficient.

Revision of Court Fought by D. A. R.

The Daughters of the American Revolution approved a resolution yesterday opposing the President's court reform bill and asking that the people be allowed to vote on the question.

As cordially as if she knew each one personally, as cheerfully as if they had just voted approval of her husband's proposed court plan, Mrs. Roosevelt shook hands with 4,500 Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday afternoon. The occasion was the White House reception for the forty-sixth Continental Congress.

Receiving in the blue room, with the D. A. R. president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, at her side, the First Lady stood, smiled and extended her hand to each of the thousands of women who filed slowly by her for more than three hours. She wore a blue and white flowered chiffon afternoon dress, with an orchid on her shoulder.

Beribboned, bouqueted and accompanied by white-clad pages, national officers and State regents of the White House by the front door and were received before the other delegates, whose cards admitted them at the east entrance, came up the steps. Most of the early arrivals, however, lingered in the state dining room and in the upper and lower halls, crowding back again and again to the door of the blue room for "just one more look at Mrs. Roosevelt," until the reception was over.

District's D. A. R. Organizes Youth

Citizens of the future have been the chief interest of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution the past year, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent, told the forty-sixth Continental Congress in her annual report yesterday.

Six new clubs of junior American citizens have been organized in D. C. public schools, making a total of 11 groups now with a membership of more than 400 boys and girls, Mrs. Haig said. "Our slogan now is 'A club in every public school in the District,'" she added.

Seventy-seven youngsters were sent to camp last summer from the junior groups, the report further revealed. Programs on national defense and wide participation in the good citizenship contest have been sponsored by 3,500 members of the District D. A. R. societies the past winter.

Other work accomplished since the 1936 congress includes the contribution of $1,500 for scholarships to approved schools, the sending of 14 boxes and $190 cash contributions to Ellis Island, and the presentation of two prizes of $15 each to students at George Washington University and American University for the best essay on American history.

Embezzling Laid To Former Teller

A charge that he embezzled $775 from the former Potomac Saving Bank of Georgetown was preferred against Zebulon C. Hodges, jr., in District Court yesterday. The former savings teller was charged with taking money from the institution prior to its amalgamation with the Hamilton National Bank.

The alleged embezzlement was observed when early 1934 audits were made. Charles B. Murray, assistant United States attorney, told the jury the defalcation were covered by taking records of regular accounts from the files and substituting fictitious ledger cards. There are five counts. Embezzlements of 500; $100; $100; $50 ,and $25 are charged.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

STOP! THE BICARBONATE OF SODA HABIT

If You Have Stomach Trouble Due to Excess Acid Soda May Make It Worse

Bicarbonate of Soda is a wolf in sheep's clothing. You think it's helping you—and it does for the moment. But all the while it is making matters worse. Bicarbonate neutralises the excess acid that causes heartburn, sour stomach, belching, sourness, bloating, acid indigestion THEN it starts neutralising the NORMAL acid content of the stomach. This normal acid content is essential for good digestion. If it's knocked out of balance—made alkaline—your stomach is knocked out, too.

So lay off Bicarbonate. There's a better, safer way to stomach relief—Cal-Trate Tablets. They neutralize ONLY the EXCESS acid that causes the trouble. Then they harmlessly pass out of the system. Be sure you ask for and get Cal-Trate Tablets—they contain no Bicarbonate of Soda and are not a laxative. Sold and recommended by Peoples, and all good druggists. (Adv.)

Jane Cowl Will Return to Lead NewShowWeek

'First Lady' Is Booked at National to Rival Strong Film Bills.

After three weeks of the road show engagement of "The Good Earth," at the National Theater, the stage of that venerable tabernacle of the living drama will be devoted Monday night to the presentation of a return week's engagement of Jane Cowl's current hit, "The First Lady." This is a collaboration of Katherine Dayton and George S. Kaufman, already known to Washington audiences as a comedy of the first rank. Miss Cowl, on her return engagement, will be supported by virtually the same cast as was seen here last, led by Ann Mason, as the rival socialite. There will be the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea will be the pictured co-stars of "Internes Can't Take Money," on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. They will be supported by a strong cast led by Stanley Ridges and Lloyd Nolan. On the stage, the living bill will be headlined by Horace Heidt and His Alemite Brigadiers, assisted by the King Sisters, Alvine Rey, Lysbeth Hughes, Alyce King, Bob McCay and a long list of other specialists.

There are more stars than you can shake a stick at in "The Hit Parade," which comes to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorow. The roster ranges from popular bands and radio stars in addition to the long enrollment of screen players who lend their talents to this feature—Ed Brophy, Inez Courtney, Pert Kelton, Max Terhune, Sammy White, Phil Regan, Louise Henry and all the rest. On the stage, the bill will be headlined by Lenore Ulric, famous Belasco star of the stage and screen. Little Jack Heller also will add luster to the stage goings-on.

Bette Davis, one of the Academy Award winners as the best actress of the banner year, 1935, will move on the screen of the Metropolitan Theater in "Marked Woman" for the week beginning tomorow. A strong cast has been assembled for the star's support. The bill will be augmented by the usual short-reel subjects.

Contrary to all reports, here and elsewhere, "The Woman I Love," costarring Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins, will not open on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater until tomorrow. A print was not available at an earlier date. The bill will be completed by the customary short subjects and Pathe News.

At the Belasco Theater next will be shown the French production of "Girls' Club," a foreign-made subject with superimposed English subtitles. The story is said to be not unlike that of "Maedschen in Uniform." The bill will be completed by short subjects and news events.

"Star of Midnight" is the title of the screen attraction to be shown at the Rialto Theater for the week beginning Sunday. William Powell and Ginger are the co-stellar luminaries of this production. As a companion offering will be shown "The Lost Patrol," in which the principal role is played by Victor McLaglen.

At the Little Theater, for the week beginning Sunday, the chief screen feature will be a revival of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the fabulous Columbia production in which the stellar role is played by Gary Cooper, with Jean Arthur in support. The bill, needless to say, will be rounded out by short subjects and news events.

"Waikiki Wedding," a romance of "pineapple girls" and the Hawaiian Islands, with Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, George Barbier and Shirley Ross in the pivotal roles, will be continued for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. The short subjects also will be retained.

Mikhail Mordkin, one of the greatest exponents of the Russian ballet, brings his large company to the stage of the National Theater on Sunday night for a single performance. The two ballets to be presented under the management of William A. Albaugh are new to Washington. Eugene Fuerst is the musical conductor.

Glen Echo, having got off to a flying start, is attracting record-breaking crowds in the first week of its season. All of the standard attractions are running full blast, with the exception of the crystal pool, which will not open until shortly before Memorial Day.

"Maytime," that superlatively recorded film version of Sigmund Romberg's operetta of the same name, will resume its F street run at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The stellar roles are admirably played and sung by Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. John Barrymore leads the support.

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the usual Sabbath matinee, the attraction will be Hindu Wasau, foremost of the new order of revelatory artistes, who will be assisted by Madge Carmyle, Jai-Leta and other members of a new Independent Burlesque Association production.

"A Star Is Born" Is Heralded as Something to Rave About; Boy, Page Mr. Samson and His Shorn Locks; Preview of "Lysistrata" at Wardman on Monday; Visitors Come to Town in Large Numbers; Variety Goes to Town for the Underprivileged Youngsters. Current Amusement Notes.

HERE is the wire that this column received yesterday from our old friend Oscar Doob, director of advertising and publicity for Loew's Inc., in New York

"I don't bother you often with wires but can not resist rushing you a telegraphic rave on 'A Star Is Born.' Just screened it for a roomful of weeping, laughing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives.

BELL.

"When a United Artists picture moves M-G-M executives, that's news. Seriously, we believe 'A Star Is Born' is sure to be a box-office smash. Sentimentally, the interesting point is what a tremendous thing this picture will be for the careers of Janet Gaynor and Fredric March. Am asking Carter Barron to screen it for you soon as print arrives in hope you'll like it as much as I do. Regards. OSCAR A. DOOB."

There it is for what it may be worth—and knowing Oscar as I do and have for a good many years—his approval ought to mean that the new film is worth something. If Carter Barron makes good on the Doob threat, there ought to be more of this business coming along in course of time.

When, as and if there is, I shall do my utmost to try not to keep it out of the paper.

A preview of "Lysistrata" will be given on Monday, April 26, at 8:30 o'clock in Wardman Park Theater by the Washington Civic Theater.

The preview will be sponsored by a group of the Washington Section of the National Council of Jewish Juniors and is for the benefit of the Dorothy Goldsmith Recreation Fund, the purpose of which is to send underprivileged children to summer camps during the summer months. Tickets are available at the boxoffice in the Ralegh Hotel, or may be secured from Anne Bachrach, phone NO. 5837-J.

It is nice to know that Terry Green, singing with the Casa Loma Band at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, is one of the few artistes who deems it worth while to call up or write the drama desks that accord her the credit to which she is rightfully entitled. You can count this list—or I can—almost on the fingers of one hand. Ruth Etting, Mitzi Mayfair, Jack Powell, Gracie Barrie and one or two others stand high on its rolls.

Word comes to me from Roland Robbins, manager of the Trans-Lux Theater, that, beginning Friday, his tasty little newsreel house will present, in addition to 40 minutes of world events, "The Country Cousin," United Artists' prize-winning Walt Disney "Silly Symphony;" Paramount Pictorial, "Fleet Hoofs," which necessarily has to do with horses and other novelties in the way of short-reel picturization.

The entire bill will run an hour and a quarter and will comprise a considerable entertainment.

In town this week: Fred Rohrs, new Washington Branch Exchange manager for United Artists; Charles Stern, district sales manager for the same organization; Sid and Helen Lehman, also of United Artists, down from Buffalo for fun and a few odd chores; Lou Brown and Shirley, over from Baltimore to pinch-hit for Ray Bell—no relationship—and Virginia, en route to Italy on the S. S. Roma for that prize vacation; Ed Kuykendall, back from the Memphis conclave—to which he took "Pete." "Pete," since you would not otherwise know, is Mrs. Ed Kuykendall, generally resident in Columbus, Miss. Although at present a high-strung Southern gentleman, like Old Sam Galanty, Ed was born in this column's native State of Indiana. Not that it matters;

The coming of Lenore Ulric to the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning Friday brings to mind an odd combination of impressions that go back through the years a bit.

The first substantial stage success Miss Ulric ever had was Richard Walton Tully's "The Bird of Paradise." This was an Hawaiian tragedy of a young native who finally sacrificed her life in the flaming maw of a raging volcano. But the point is this. While "The Bird of Paradise" introduced Miss Ulric as a star, it also introduced Toots Paka and Her Royal Hawaiian Troubadours as the first exponents of the Hawaiian steel guitar and plaintive Polynesian music on the American stage.

If you care to hear the counterpart of what Toots Paka and her associates did for "The Bird of Paradise," go to see and hear Bing Crosby Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross in "Waikiki Wedding." You never will know the difference.

David Manley, well-known Washington tenor, will be guest soloist with Pearl Hauer in her regular "Myriad Voices" hour at the organ at the Rialto Theater next week. While Mr. Manley's program will be essentially different at each performance, he still will manage to give fair play to alternate renditions of "Little Old Lady" and "When Day Is Done." A limited number of requests also will be sung, so get your nominations in early.

The first event of the new drive of the Variety Club of Washington to fulfill its obligation as a charitable organization will be celebrated at St. Vincent's Home and School on Friday night at 7:30. There will be a real punch in the program that has been planned for the membership of the club as well as for the enrollment of St. Vincent's. And don't say I didn't tell you.

Casual Observation Note.

On spring days like yesterday, when it is raining cats, dogs and hammer-handles, the best thing to do is sleep through the downpour. No fooling. Try it some time.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, April 21.—Settin Around (Warner Brothers): The imposing edifice, completely surrounded by an 8-foot wall and standing at the studio's north gate, is Marion Davies' bungalow. Sight of it gives me the sighs. How gladly I would swap my humbie home for Marion's castle, unquestionably the most elaborate dressing quarters in Hollywood history. A ten-room, two-story house, it has a private theater, a luxurious living room that contains thousands of dollars worth of fine paintings, and a bedroom suite that would make a confirmed insomniac pant for night to come.

MARION DAVIES.

Sight of the Davies mansion takes my mind back a few years. Marion had severed connections with M. G. M., and signed with Warners. That magnificent dressing bungalow was moved bodily from the former studio to the latter, a distance of 18 miles. As it rolled majestically across Hollywood's main boulevard, my companion of the day cried, "Good Lord, what's that?" "Marion Davies' bungalow," I explained, "en route to its new studio. My companion eyed the spectacle soberly, then murmured, "Heaven forbid that she ever sign a deal with an independent producer. That hotel would look silly in Poverty Row." (Poverty Row is the street of dilapidated studios where "quickies" are made.)

I paid a brief visit to Miss Davies' set, "Ever Since Eve" (intriguing title). Allen Jenkins was filming a scene in a drenching downpour of synthetic rain. He stood the test well enough, but his suit had withdrawn a few inches, and the comedian was bemoaning his state to the director. "I've got to have another suit," he said, "because this one has shrink." "You mean shrunk, don't you?" corrected the director. "No, I mean shrink," insisted Jenkins. "It ain't that much small."

Patsy Kelly was on this same set, and I am still chuckling over her crack at the expense of a talkative woman visitor. This woman rushed up to Miss Kelly and gushed, "Oh, and haven't I seen you in pictures? "Yes, I'm sure I have. I've seen you several times!" With a perfectly dead pan, Patsy tch-tched, and murmured, "My, my. Isn't it a small world!"

The "Kid Galahad" set was a huge fight arena. Wayne Morris and Bill Haade (watch this New York stage actor, debuting in this picture; he is on his way) were slugging away, and 1,000 extras were doing a Madison Square Garden job of howling for blood. The sequence ended and Morris stepped from the ring, his face swollen, one eye darkened, his nose a bloody mess. A woman reporter from a midwest newspaper exclaimed, "Goodness, do they really do things so realistically in the movies?" Wayne overheard her. "Yep, lady," he grinned, "and I'm going to quit before I get all marked up." Then he smeared cold cream on his face and rubbed briskly. He came out of the towel without a scar, black eye, or bloody nose, all of which had been clever makeup.

The $100,000 suit instituted by Dr. Landsteiner of Rockefeller Institute against the publishers of "Who's Who in Jewry" for including his name in that publication is reported to have been settled already—with the doctor's name remaining in that book.

SYLVIA SIDNEY left by plane for Hollywood Saturday. When she was about to step into the plane a messenger delivered a turkey sandwich, sent by a solicitous broker, who is a member of one of New York's most prominent families. LAST WEEK ALFRED FARO, a frustrated song writer, hurled a brick through Lindy's window, hoping in that way to attract the attention of song publishers who congregate there. Around the brick Faro had wrapped copies of his unpublished songs. He was jailed immediately. . . . Two days later, Leo Lindy called his own attorney, and hired him to go to court and withdraw the charges against Faro. "After all," the restaurateur stated, "the poor guy is down and out" . . . MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Fascinated by Musician to Whom She Was Not Introduced, Girl Wonders Whether to Send Him a Note.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I detest presumptuous women, and am wondering if what I am contemplating doing will make me appear one. Some time ago, at a very nice dance here in Washington, where a nationally known orchestra played, I struck up a conversation with the vocalist. He was a nice chap from my section of the country, and we found that we had a few things in common.

• • • •

However, all did not go as smoothly as it might, for my escort was right at my elbow all the time, and although he did ask me once what my name was (in a stage whisper when my escort's head was turned away for the moment), I did not have an opportunity to answer. When we said good-by he asked me to look him up if I ever came up to New York, and told me where he was living and where the orchestra was playing. However, I have not since been up to New York.

• • • •

I find now that the orchestra is coming here in the near future to play at one of the local theaters. I would really like very much to see the young man again. I am wondering if it would seem too forward to address a note to him at the theater, marked "hold for arrival," and say somehing which might perhaps recall me to his memory, and give him my telephone number so that he could call me if he cared to.

• • • •

I don't wish to sign my name as if I were just another "port in a storm" to him. I would prefer to keep my identity concealed. I would give my office telephone number, as I am the only girl in the office and always answer the telephone. Please advise me on this, as I have never done anything of this sort before and am anxious to know what you think of it. UNCERTAIN.

What to Believe.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: If you send such a note as you have in mind you will automatically place yourself on record as being a somewhat forward and foolishly infatuated young woman. Had the vocalist been as fascinated with you as you were with him I am sure he would have made it his business to secure an introduction before the evening was over or, at least, to have established your identity before you vanished from the scene. Since he did not, we can only assume that he was indulging in a passing and quickly forgotten flirtation with one who appealed to him at the moment as the prettiest or most provocative girl on the dance floor.

He may be a married man with children, or he may be engaged, or he may be in love, or he may be a footloose and fancy-free bachelor. But since you know nothing whatever about him, the sensible procedure is to try to forget him on the supposition that he has already forgotten you. However, fan mail is no novelty to popularly acclaimed entertainers, so if you simply cannot rest until you have seen this thing through to some sort of finish you might write him a note some time during the week he is here, addressed to him in care of the theater.

• • • •

Let it be informal and candid, and not a furtively anonymous bid for a date. It might go something like this: "Mr. John Blank, care Doe's Theater, Washington, D. C. Dear Mr. Blank: I dropped into Doe's Theater last night with friends and there, by happiest accident, found none other than yourself warbling in the spotlight. You seemed in even better voice than you were the evening of the Astorbilt dance here on February 10. Do you remember? You were playing at the Rickrack Club and I was the fascinated female in the green dress who reminisced with you about the tall corn in Iowa." Then go on with some sincere compliment about the beauty of his voice and how nice it was to hear him again, and conclude by signing your name as you would sign it to any social correspondence with a friend who is not an intimate. If the message is on stationery which bears your name and address as part of the letterhead, the way will be opened for him to call you, or thank you by note if he so desires. M. H.

How to Wear Class Ring.?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Would you please be so kind as to settle an argument that has waged for some time? The question is this: What is the correct way to wear a school ring? Is it to be worn so that the owner or wearer should be able to read it? Or should it be worn so that others, wishing to admire or inspect it, may do so without necessitating the removal of the ring from the wearer's finger?

The type ring I refer to is the kind which has the year and some emblem engraved on it. I believe your opinion would settle quite a few disputes that have recently been started. Thank you very much. STUDENT.

• • • •

DEAR STUDENT: If prevailing custom makes for corectness—and I suppose it does, if the axiom, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do," means anything—then the proper way to wear a class ring is with the inscription and insignia reversed from the wearer's eyes, so that he who runs may read. However, my personal sympathies would be on the side of the rugged individualist who chose to wear his ring so that he could read it and the public be hanged! M. H.

Feminine Touches for Your Tailored Suit

Spring and summer fashions not only stress femininity, but capture the charm and grace of the past by borrowing from past eras and modernizing the inspiration. In this realm is the handbag of petit point, reflecting the trend toward embroidery and hand work as a smart trimming. Formerly petit point was restricted to the formality of evening wear; modern versions make it adaptable to accompany street and afternoon costumes. The design, as well as the clever new shape, give the bag pictured here a smart, modern air; the colors make it versatile enough to complement numerous costumes. The simple suit is further feminined by the lace jabot collar of the blouse and the chic straw hat topped with daisies.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

"AMERICAN WOMEN do not know how to take baths—oh, yes, they tub and shower frequently and use sweet-smelling bath salts and oils—but I insist that they do not realize the value to health of proper bathing and that health is the open door to beauty." These drastic statements were made by Mme. Elene, of Vienna, who is in Washington this week. Taking a tip from the old Romans, and such charmers of history as Cleopatra and Salome, Mme. Elene maintains the bath should be a ceremony, a ritual, and not something prosaic and haphazard.

Beauty Depends on Health.

"One's health depends much upon the way that the body breathes through the millions of pores in our skin; this infers the elimination of toxins and the like, through the pores," she volunteered. For this reason, the bath should have therapeutic value, and that is synonymous with cleanliness, she contends. Contrary to general belief, Mme. Elene does not believe that beauty is only from the neck up. "Don't give all of the attention to the face—beauty does not come in little jars and bottles, but from a healthy body, which in turn means a clear complexion and radiant skin," Mme. Elene advised.

Mme. Elene, who is a graduate chemist and beautician, became interested in beauty through health when just a child. Being a frail youngster she was taken to the spas by her father, who was a physical culture professor as well as a dancing master in Vienna. This led to a study of the value of pine oils and herbs—the healing properties of ancient man as translated from old tables unearthed by archeologists, she told us. Later on, she perfected in her own laboratory products which would give the same results as the rejuvenating spas in Europe; bath salts containing blends of 8 different pine oils and 11 other oils and herbs from the Black Forest, Siberia and the Austrian Tyrol, and the same ingredients in a lotion to be used as a body rub after the bath.

Recipe for Beauty Bath.

This is Mme. Elene's recipe for correct bathing, as practiced by Viennese women, who are noted for their beauty and vitality; she calls it a "five-in-one treatment," for health and beauty: Turn on the water to fill the tub (not too hot), and while this is being done, cleanse the face and neck with cleansing cream and then apply a tissue cream (or a special corrective cream of oils and balsams). Add a tablespoonful of the pine bath crystals, which contain all the medicinal elements of sea and woods, to the bath water, and inhale the pungent vapor while bathing; this invigorates and refreshes. "Do not use a soft wash cloth for scrubbing the body," Mme. Elene admonished, "but a long-handled brush with stiff bristles; this friction is good for the circulation. The same is true of bath towels—they should be rough-textured."

While in the bath, it is an excellent idea, this expert suggested, to place pads of cotton saturated with eye lotion over the eyes—it soothes the eyes and erases tired lines. "After such a bathing ritual, you will feel relaxed and years younger," concluded Mme. Elene. "And if continued daily, it will give you health and incidentally beauty."

Hearty Sunday Breakfast Lost In 'Hurry' Era

By the Associated Press.

New York.—That old American institution — Sunday breakfast—is disappearing, a survey today disclosed.

The Sabbath morning feasts that put grandpa to sleep in the family pew in the middle of the sermon are now found only on the farm, and often not there.

Down in Virginia, which always has boasted of its cooking, a gentleman of the old school would suffer. The steaks he loved are gone from the breakfast menu.

Hot breads, waffles, fried apples, liver and bacon—or maybe kidney hash, broiled fish and cantaloupe, in that order—was what he used to get in Richmond, but now it's hardly ever more than orange juice, toast, eggs, bacon or ham or sausage, and coffee.

A hardy few still ask for corn sticks, batter, cup bread of buckwheat cakes. But the old-time breakfast steaks—never.

Up, in Boston, where Sunday breakfast once began on Friday night, the best one now can get to stave off hunger until dinner time is fruit juice, scrambled eggs, bacon, toast and coffee.

This is in a country where for generations housewives began baking beans on Friday night, serving them for dinner Saturday night and serving them again with hot, brown bread, codfish balls, apple pie and doughnuts before church on Sunday morning.

The machine age gets the blame for the passing of the old-time Sunday breakfast in the industrial East. It built up cities, split up families into apartment dwellers, developed instruments of pleasure that drew people away from church, and telescoped breakfast and lunch into one brief meal—"brunch."

Knee-Length Overall.

Hollywood.—The newest version of whacked-off slacks is really a knee-length overall. These overalls of cotton or linen with contrasting blouses in pottery shades stormed Hollywood last summer with Gloria de Haviland and Carol Hughes leading the parade. This year the overalls are cut off at the knee and worn to the beach. The bibs are cut so high that they can be worn as sun suits minus a blouse.

Wife, Mother Must Keep Up With Children

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH had married well. Her husband was climbing the ladder of success very rapidly, and his social contacts were improving in proportion to his advancement. Mrs. Smith never envisioned the future.

Only when the children grew out of babyhood did she begin to take stock. Her first intimation of trouble came when her oldest child, in reply to a correction, said, "You don't know anything about such matters, Mother. The girls I know are quite different from your friends."

Failed to Adjust.

It was true. While her husband and children were adjusting themselves to new environments, new standards of thought and living, Mrs. Smith had remained essentially the same person who, on graduating from school 15 years before, had married the rising young engineer and borne his children.

It is a bad thing for the whole family if husband and wife do not keep on the same level of development. A man, by reason of his work and the ambition driving him to succeed, is very apt to outstrip the woman. She always has the excuse that housework and bearing and caring for children are confining occupations. True, they are, but she cannot stand still.

Middle Age Too Late.

When she is middle aged and able to catch her breath once more, it will be too late for her to start catching up.

There are books, magazines, newspapers, radios; there are classes for adults: groups of women studying and discussing all manner of things. She need not discard her old friends and traditions, but she can keep up with what her husband and children are doing and thinking.

Cotton Evening Gown.

Joan Crawford, movie actress, is carrying on Adrian's idea of sponsoring cotton for summer wear. The star's new evening gown is of black organdy, stripped with white about the hemline. A short black bolero jacket has the same white trim, and fluffy organdy flowers ornament the high neckline.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"EVERY TIME I hear the gay lilt of Percy Grainger's 'Country Garden' I dream of the 'some day' kitchen I want," remarked Hazel, "and it won't be one of your stark clinical kitchens either. You know, the English country garden is not the flamboyant affair you might expect. It's just what our American farm wives would call a 'kitchen' garden—small, handy plantings of vegetables, the cozy vegeatbles that any sturdy housekeeper might like to run out to if she planned a pot of soup—leeks and tomatoes, bush beans and tiny green peas, a corner for succulent mint and a border of herbs—sage and thyme and the like.

"Well, I want a country garden—and a country kitchen to go with it. I'll yield to the present on some points. My garden will have the latest sprinkler and gadgets and my kitchen will have an efficient stove, an easily kept clean sink and a good floor covering. But I want all the cupboards painted red with stencil decorations in bright pleasant colors. I'll have the type of linoleum that stimulates wide-board floors and the walls will be painted lettuce green. In the center I'll have a work table—and what a work table! Long and easily accessible at both sides with a rack for shining aluminum pots and kettles above. I'll have a cotton print at the windows in gay Tyrolean colors, tomato reds and sky blues and mustard reds and sky blues and mustard yellows and olive greens. I'll let myself go with pottery ware and I won't give a hoot if nothing matches.

"From this kitchen door I will step into a country garden, small, snug and homely with a picket gate. I may be formal as all get out in our dining room, but in the garden I'll be a field hand and in the kitchen I'll be just a hausfrau and woe unto anyone who disturbs me at my task of either raising my onions or making onion soup in an earthen pot."

It goes without saying that Hazel is a cook in a million, as well as a gardener with a knack, which reminds us that an awful lot of the really clever and talented girls we know in th arts are simply wonderful cooks. They do all those subtle things with seasonings and sauces, which impresses us so.

New Shades Shown In Paris Art Exhibits

The exhibit of Degas paintings in Paris has introduced some new shades, among them a faded salmon pink and faded pastel tints in general. An attractive shade of bright enamel blue also is outstanding.

Purple is a new note for accessories. It is used for sweaters or blouses matched, in sportswear by purple kerchief headdresses tied over the forehead. Purple belts with cross-stitched motifs in gayly colored wools are worn over gray suits.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

THAT Nebraska psychologist, Prof. W. E. Walton, certainly started something when he remarked that persons with odd first names might wake up some morning and find their personalities seriously mangled. There's been more than a bit of muttered cussing here at unfeeling parents since Doc Walton sounded off, and several prospective mamas at once gave up all notions of "Ermintrude" and decided quickly on "Jane."

We have an actor here named Oothout Zabriskie Whitehead, and he says he still feels pretty good, though everyone just gives up and calls him "O. Z." A local lawyer named Hyacinthe Ringrose is a little bitter, because he is always getting mail addressed "Miss," and he wishes his mama and papa had been a little more restrained. As for Zasu Pitts, who got her handle by mixing up the syllables of her aunts, Eliza and Susan, tells me she is only fretted when people pronounce it wrongly. It should be "Zay-su"—not "Zaaaa-su," so be careful, you all.

Of course, there are a lot of number-names. We have a Naydeyne Montgomery here who got hers by way of numerology, and says she has always felt lucky. We all remember, of course, from our movie primers, that Carol Lombard became "Carole" because a numerologist told her the added E would make everything just wonderful. And that blonde has certainly done all right.

Still, in such times of mental stress and strain, it's sort of nice to go to bed at night comforted with just plain Alice. What could happen to an "Alice"—except be born a Roosevelt, or wear a blue gown, or die young and beautiful like the adorer of Ben Bolt?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sheila Barrett, the noted mimic and current honey child of our night-life (Texas girl, too), is said to be planning to marry Mr. Pat Patterson, of Cleveland, who has been courting her for some time. If she does go up to the altar, Sheila always tells me, she'll stop amusing thousands of people and devote herself entirely to amusing her husband. And I'll guarantee there'll never be a dull moment in the Barrett tepee! . . .

I'll tell you frankly, you can't kick a beauty parlor operator and get away with it, not even if you don't agree on the quality of the finger wave! One of our school teachers, Gertrude Mannis, just found this out. She's been found guilty of kicking and scratching a hair-stylist named Kyriak because she didn't like the curls! I must add that she also booted a mirror into many pieces —which undoubtedly was the real cause of all her trouble. . .

Dr. Henry Sigerist, a noted prof at the Johns Hopkins, estimates that two out of three of the doctors graduated in Russia in the next five years will be women. Just what is your attitude on lady doctors? There's always been a concrete, triple-distilled prejudice against them among members of their own sex . . .

Prince David, last of the three Marrying Mdivanis, has turned up here from California, and is re-seeing the town with his sister, who is now Mrs. Conan Doyle, daughter-in-law of the great daddy of Sherlock Holmes, now deceased (Conan Doyle, not Sherlock, silly!). Dave is now maritally eligible, and busybodies at our knitting orgies whisper that Sis might do a bit of matchmaking if the chance offers.

Once a tennis champ, always a clothes designer, it appears like. Helen Wills has been styling sports things for a long spell, and now Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, who preceded Helen as national champ for many years, emerges as a designer of smart tennis shorts. She likes 'em pleated and from one to three inches above the knee. Molla says girls have been wearing shorts designed for men—too shorts, not loose enough. Now I'm waiting for word from Helen Jacobs. She ought to have some sort of clothes stunt up a sleeve or two.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Constitutions Differ.

EVERYBODY knows the old story of Aunt Sarah, who got Uncle John's cough mixture refilled to give it to little Betty because she seemed to have the same kind of a cough as Uncle John.

Put in that way, we all see the ridiculousness of such a procedure—age, sex and constitution would indicate that the two coughs were entirely different and could not be treated by the same remedy. So Aunt Sarah's attempt to save a doctor's bill was somewhat uneconomic. But, under other conditions, people forget this relationship and are inclined to assume that advice about disease and its treatment can be applied to the population at large.

Make It Individual.

One of the things that I have frequently insisted on in this column is that when a diet must be prescribed for an individual person in a household, the entire family should not be compelled to go on the diet, but the housewife should fit the household arrangements to the needs of the particular case and also to the family in general, so that the family will not suffer from the restricted diet of the sick individual.

This wisdom is not new and, indeed, I find no better statement of it than in the writings of one of the medical fathers who lived in the second century A. D. I quote from Galen "On the Preservation of Health":

"Amongst the chief essentials—indeed the elementary basis, as it were—of the whole subject of hygiene, is the fact that there are among people a great many different constitutions; and this is acknowledged by all doctors and gymnasts. The majority of them, however, write about hygienic treatment as though they were dealing with a single individual, and accordingly they give no proof of any single individual having been helped by them. They ought, however, to have pointed out not merely one, but a great many individuals who, constantly ill before, had been eventually kept by them for many years free from disease. . . . For my part, however, I prove this by actual results; people who have before been constantly ill I keep free from disease by persuading them to follow hygienic precepts. . . .

Some Are Forbidden.

Thus, some I forbid to take any exercise at all—that is to say, exercise by occupations—as I consider the ordinary functions of life enough for them. Some I order to abstain from excess exercises, so as to reduce the whole to the smallest limits; some only to change the kind of exercises, or the order, or the time; some to alter their entire plan. Similarly, I give advice about bathing—either not to bathe at all, or more than before, or less, and only before meals, or also after meals; or with colder or warmer water than usual. Thus I have kept people well for a great number of years.

Coronation Styles Rule Hair Dressing In London Circles

London (AP)—Hair styles have been affected tremendously by the coronation. There are "coronets" of tight curls, the rest of the hair forming a smooth cap. Curls sweep back off the forehead up at the back, designed to take the tiara. Few Englishwomen, as yet, have copied the old-fashioned "fringe" Queen Elizabeth wears on her forehead.

Emile, court hairdresser—he will dress the queen's hair early coronation morning, May 12—has devised a method of fixing coronets so they won't topple or slip. Several peeresses plan to wear elastic bands like those in children's hats, but Emile has another system.

First a hard plait of hair is wound just behind the tiara. On this tufted plait is placed a "birdcage" of muslin over a wire frame. The coronet is fitted over the "birdcage," which is held in place by two gold hatpins, and the noblewoman is safe from the embarrassment of dropping her coronet.

"Coronation bells" is a hair style already popular at Mayfair parties. It takes an expert a half hour to do the job. Here is the procedure:

Part the hair in the center, dividing the forepeak into two. Then make little bell curls, each one falling away from the part, around the head. Into each bell is fixed, with tiny hairpins, a crystal, silver or gold circle from which hangs a pearl. The back hair is done into soft rolls.

First take into account the trend of fashion. However elegantly true-to-the-moment is your new Spring wardrobe, it will fail in its effect if it is not accompanied by exactly the right make-up. Thanks to Elizabeth Arden's Color Harmony Boxes, a woman can now replan her face so that in every single detail it harmonizes with her outfit. Her New Royal Complexion is a fitting tribute to the gaieties of Coronation Year. Her English Complexion will give you that pretty new pink-and-white look. And last...but not least, Elizabeth Arden's latest masterpiece, Glamour Complexion (achieved by the use of two powders, subtly superimposed) gives a soft and wonderfully translucent look.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Lady Marler, wife of the Minister of Canada, entertained several hundred guests yesterday afternoon at an "at home" in the Legation for which she had issued cards. It was one of the few teas given this season in the Capital at which only women were present.

From the drawing room, where Lady Marler received, guests went through the adjoining salon and the broad upper hall to the dining room where tea was served. Throughout the legation there is handsomely-carved workwork. The paneled walls of the dining room are decorated with carvings of grapes and flowers which staud out in bold relief.

Lady Marler, who wore a simple peach and white chiffon gown, was assisted by Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Counselor of the Legation, who will leave soon with Mr. Wrong for the coronation and a vacation in England; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the First Secretary, whose sister, Mrs. Percy Holt, had just arrived from Ottawa, Canada, and was among the guests; Mrs. Ronald MacDonnell, wife of the Third Secretary, and Miss Willa Magee.

Alternate at Tea Table.

Alternating at the tea table were Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Frank Heywood, of the British Embassy; Miss Harriett Winslow, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith and several former Canadians who included Mrs. Paul R. Greever, wife of Representative Greever; Mrs. Fred Wright, Mrs. Charles V. Crawford and Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown.

Among the guests were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, one of the early arrivals; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, one of those who came late in the afternoon.

Among others were Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Baroness von Below, who wore a gray costume with a small corsage of velvet nasturtiums; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard; Senoritas Marta and Graciela Trucco, daughters of the Chilean Ambassador; Mme. Alfaro, wife of the former president of Panama, and her daughter, Mrs. Frank Weller; Miss Dorothy Sollers; Mrs. Norman Murray Smith, wearing a blue cape over a blue flowered print and a small blue turban trimmed with flowers; Mme. Sable, wife of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, and Representative Caroline O'Day, wearing a broad-brimmed black straw hat with her black and white costume.

Mme. Fotitch Attends.

In a group in the dining room were Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslavian Minister; Mme. Molekamp, of the Netherlands Legation, and Mme. Dimitriu, of the Rumanian Legation, discussing tap dancing, a recreation which recently has taken the attention of some of the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps. Mme. Molekamp and Mme. Schlatter, who came later in the afternoon accompanied by Frau Blankenhorn, had been ice skating earlier in the day at the Shoreham.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, was there wearing a trim tailored suit and a little bouquet of lilies of the valley in the buttonhole.

Among others were Mrs. S. C. Bradley, of the British Embassy; Miss Elizabeth Howry; Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia; Mrs. Peyton March, and Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, who wore dress and hat of brown. With her were Senora de Muxo, wife of the First Secretary, and Mme. Aguiar, wife of the Commercial Attache.

Also there were Frau Thomsen, wife of the German Counselor; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, and two of her daughters, the Misses Laura and Alice Tuckerman; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. Allan Chantry, and her daughter, Carolyn; Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and Miss Lee Washington.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

Around the town and whom did we see—well just crossing Rhode Island avenue stepping along in a spritely manner was Mrs. W. W. Howes, wife of the First Assistant Postmaster General. Having become used to seeing her in blacks and blues, we had to look a second time before we recognized her happy smiling face beneath the brown sports hat, which topped off her beige ensemble.

As we were waiting for the green light at Florida avenue, whom should come purring out from S street and go zooming up Connecticut avenue in his huge car but Admiral Sable of the French Embassy. At the very next corner where a red light halted our progress, a sedan drew up beside us and in front sat Emanuel Dimitrius, of the Rumanian Legation.

The other afternoon—one of the bright, sunny ones—Col. Henry L. Stimson was out horseback riding. Before he got away from the stables, photographers out for some snaps in connection with horsey Washingtonians and the forthcoming Washington Horse Show to be given May 7, 8 and 9 at the Meadowbrook—caught up with him and begged him to pose. Now, in case you have ever wondered what to say to impress picture-takers that you are not in the mood for a picture take a tip here.

And that was that.

Speaking of people on horseback, when we were driving through a portion of Rock Creek Park one afternoon last week we came upon a very pretty scene—a rider accompanied by a very large Russian wolf hound was standing in the very center of an elevated clearing—looking again at the equestrienne, whose tan habit had a touch of yellow at the neck, we discovered it was Mrs. Robert Watson.

Now that spring has come to stay, many people are taking the opportunity to drive through the surrounding country, and Mrs. Frank Hogan is no exception. Yesterday she took a few friends up to the Rod and Gun Club, near Harpers Ferry, for luncheon and an afternoon of bridge. Mrs. Joseph A. Marr and Mrs. Edwin B. Wilber were among the guests.

Ground will be broken within the next ten days for Mrs. Ward's new home on Allison Island in Florida. She will call it Villa Suzanne, in memory of her mother. It is to have 12 rooms and at one side will be a small orange grove, the trees for which Mrs. Ward selected just before her return.

She had a bungalow this summer near the home of former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, and the new home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mack, who also recently returned from the South.

Film Official Entertains at Dinner Party

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt Is Honor Guest of Maj. Van Dyke.

Dancing, Surprise Preview of Picture Feature Function.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt was guest of honor last night at a party given in the Italian garden of the Mayflower by Maj. W. S. Van Dyke 2d, motion picture director, who is in Washington for a short vacation. The invitations announced the affair as a "Surprise Continental Recherche."

Mrs. Willebrandt, who received with the host, wore a gown of white lace made with an off-the-shoulder effect and a low back at the point of which was a cluster of orchids. After the hors d'oeuvres had had been served, the guests were shown places at small places around the dance floor, at one end of which was the long buffet table where chefs and waiters served the supper.

Troyanovskys Attend.

With the host and guest of honor were seated the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanoksky, the latter wearing a gown of flowered brocade; Senator and Mrs. Henry Ashurst; Commissioner and Mrs. George Allen, Mr. Marvin McIntyre, Dr. and Mrs. Ross McIntyre; Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, and the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Oscar L. Chapman.

An orchestra played during the supper, featuring airs from "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," the theme song from "San Francisco," and music from other pictures which Maj. Van Dyke directed. "One Night of Love" also was played for Mrs. Willebrandt who is a friend of Grace Moore.

"California, Here We Come" was the signal for dancing to begin. It was greeted with applause by the many Californians in the company. The host and Mrs. Willebrandt were the first on the floor. Mr. O'Connor, with Mrs. Allen as his partner, and others quickly followed.

After the dancing, which lasted until 10 p. m., the host presented a surprise preview of the picture, "Captains Courageous," of which Mr. Victor Fleming was the director.

About two years ago, when Mrs. Willebrandt entertained at a party at the Willard for Maj. Van Dyke and Nelson Eddy, then the newly found star of "Naughty Marietta," a preview of that film was arranged by Maj. Van Dyke. This is the first time since then that he has made a visit of any length here.

Among other guests were Baron and Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mrs. Penell C. Kirkbridge, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert P. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Osgood Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Battle, Gen. and Mrs. T. Q. Ashburn, Mr. and Mrs. Carter Barron, Mr. Barron assisted with arrangements; Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Bloedorn, Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Judge and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Col. and Mrs. C. C. March, Mr. and Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mr. Morgan Kaufman.

Miss Rose D'Amore, Mr. Lowell Mason, Mrs. Thad H. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Carmody, Justice and Mrs. Luhring, Col. William P. Upshur and Mr. Joshua Evans. Mr. Charles Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers, came only for a short time before going on to another engagement.

First Lady Is 74th Club Honor Guest

Mrs. Coffee Welcomes Mrs. Roosevelt to Luncheon.

Music and Talks Feature Program; Delegates Are Present.

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon was guest of honor at a luncheon given by members of the Seventy-fourth Club in the Congressional Club on New Hampshire avenue. She was welcomed by Mrs. Harry Coffee, president of the club, who presided at the luncheon.

The First Lady wore a black satin blouse with a black shirt of a heavier novelty silk and a black hat. The blouse was made with a high neck, the collar of which was a soft roll of gold satin matched by the heavy gold chain and ornament she wore with it. Mrs. Coffee had on a print frock, lavender and green on navy blue with a blue hat trimmed with a bouquet.

The Marine Band orchestra played and a group of songs by Mme. Malda Fani d'Aulby, accompanied by Mr. Edward J. Henneberry, as well as a short talk by Mrs. Roosevelt, was a feature of the occasion.

Mme. d'Aulby, who wore a beige lace gown with a cerise sash, sang "I Heard A Lady Sigh" (Church), "Ouvre te yeux bleus" (Massenet), and "One Fine Day" from "Mme. Butterfly." As an encore, she sang the Italian Street Song as she did recently at the benefit musicale given at the Sulgrave Club, distributing flowers through the audience. The first bouquet, a sorsage of sweet peas, bachelor buttons and spring flowers, went to Mrs. Roosevelt, and smaller ones of sweet peas to others.

The tables were arranged in an E shape, with a large bouquet of pink snapdragons and Japanese iris in the center of the head table and red roses and yellow jonquils on the three which extended down from it. With the guest of honor and Mrs. Coffee at the head table were Mrs. Phil Ferguson, who sat on Mrs. Roosevelt's right, and wore a navy blue sheer frock with white lace trimming, a large blue hat and a corsage of gardenias; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, who wore a blue wool costume suit with a gray fox collar and a navy blue hat with a veil; Mrs. Paul Greever, in a gray tailored dress with a navy blue hat trimmed in red flowers, and Mrs. Elmer J. Ryan in a hand-knitted red suit with which she wore a small black hat.

Several of the members had guests with them, most of whom were here for the D. A. R. Congress. Mrs. John J. Dempsey was hostess to Mrs. A. J. Shortall, State regent of New Mexico; Miss Mary Symer and Mrs. W. E. Park, also from that State. With Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, was Mrs. Oliver Hall, of Bangor, wife of the secretary to Gov. Barrows of Maine, who has attended the D. A. R. Congress regularly for many years. Mrs. Phil Ferguson had as her guest, Mrs. Fred Neff, of Oklahoma City, and with Mrs. Coffee were Mrs. Horace J. Cary, of Nebraska, a candidate for vice president general; Mrs. Russell Baker, Nebraska State regent, and Mrs. R. E. Knight, incoming State regent of Nebraska.

Group to Honor Minister, Wife

National Opera Committee Plans Czechoslovakian Salon Musicale.

The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban are to be honor guests Sunday of the executive committee of the National Opera at a salon musical featuring Czechoslovakian artists at which Mr. and Mrs. Edouard Albion will be hosts at their home at 3 Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

The musicle is significant in that Jan Masaryk, son of the first Czechoslovakian president, was one of the first patrons of the National Opera when organized in 1919.

One of the two young artists on the program will be Miss Maria Halama, mezzo-soprano, who is a protege of Mme. Hurban's mother, Mme. Boor, of New York. She will sing a group of Czechoslovakian songs, including a poem written by the Minister's father, Mr. Svetozar Hurban-Vajansky, and now set to music.

The other artist is Mr. Michael Eezzeg, violinist, who has just returned from Prague where he was assistant concert master of the Prague Symphony Orchestra. He made his debut in New York last year.

Mme. Hurban is sending a collection of Czechoslovakian art to the Albion home, where it will be displayed in the library for the occasion.

Mrs. Woodring, dressed in a light blue gown with a lavender orchid at the point of the "V" neck, received in the large room on the river side of the grounds. Capt. William L. Ritchie, the Secretary's aide, made the introductions.

The rooms were decorated with apple blossoms, lilacs, amaryllis and cherry blossoms and fires were lit in the fireplaces. A few tables had been set on the terrace.

Secretary Woodring mingled with guests, among whom were President and Mrs. Manuel Quezon, of the Phillippines; Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mme. Sze, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik and Mme. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Colmery, Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Taylor, Mrs. Joseph Robinson, wife of Senator Robinson; Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of Senator Austin, and Representative J. Buell Snyder.

Newsom Is Rumored as Trading Fodder for Holdout Ruffing

This Morning WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

New York, April 21.—Big Charley Ruffing, who is toast ing his toes by the fireside in his Chicago home as the Yankees plunge into another pennant race, is getting no sympathy from his former teammates in his salary argument with Col. Jake Ruppert.

POVICH.

The Yanks, who are hungry for another pennant and the World Series spoils that it brings, are hopping mad over Ruffing's hold-out tactics. So is Col. Ruppert, for that matter, and if Ruffing never pitches another ball for the Yankees, no great surprise will be registered.

Ruppert is sore because he met Ruffing's original demand for a $15,000 salary, only to have the pitcher hold out for an additional $1,000 as extra pay for his pinch-hitting. The Yankees are sore not only because they think Ruffing's presence will assure 'em another pennant but because the big right-hander fancies he is worth $1,000 extra as a pinch hitter.

* * * *

"How does he get that way?" one veteran Yankee infielder declared today. "He goes in there as a pinch hitter once or twice a week and expects to get paid extra for it. We're up there swinging every day. When one of us makes a hit that wins a game for him when he's pitching, it's all in the game. We're just doing our job. But when he makes a hit, why, he wants the club to lay something extra on the line It don't add up."

* * * *

Clark Griffith, who would deny that the sun rises in the east if he thought such an admission would spoil some of his plans, is currently denying that he is making any attempt to obtain Ruffing from the Yankees in a trade.

* * * *

But Griffith's presence in New York with his Washington ball team at this time is no accident or the mere outgrowth of his desire to see some ball games. Ruffing is on the block and Griffith wants him, certain that the acquisition of the big pitcher would make Washington a serious pennant threat.

* * * *

The Yankees' penchant for disposing of intractable players has spurred Griffith's bid. He remembers that he came into possession of Ben Chapman last season not so much because the Yankees preferred the services of Jake Powell but because Manager Joe McCarthy and Owner Ruppert were at odds with the temperamental Chapman.

* * * *

Now, Ruppert is spouting that he will never agree to Ruffing's demands, is calling Ruffing an ingrate and otherwise is assailing the pitcher who was the Yankees' leading hurler last season. Therein Griffith sees a chance to acquire the big fellow.

Griffith is reported attempting to maneuver a Ruffing-for-Newsom trade. Manager Bucky Harris, who has his own ideas of Newsom's importance to the Washington club, would welcome the deal and so would Newsom. Big Newsom's 1-0 four-hit victory over the Yanks on opening day last season has left a lingering impression with Manager McCarthy and the trade at this time is brewing merrily.

Al Simmons' three hits against the Yankees yesterday, including his long home run into the rightfield bleachers, was Griffith's chief source of joy as he watched his team win its first debut in Yankee Stadium.

"I'm glad to see that big fellow hit at this stage of the season," said Griffith. "It may mean a great year for him. Frankly, I didn't expect Simmons to hit well for at least a month. He's one of those double swingers, you know."

Double swingers?

* * * *

"Yeah; one of those fellows who keep their bat out in front of 'em up there at the plate. Not like Ruth and Gehrig and a lot of those other sluggers do. They have that bat poised back on their shoulder and ready to swing through the pitch. But Simmons brings his bat back while the pitch is coming toward him and then slaps back at it."

* * * *

"Those kind of hitters never go well in the spring. The pitchers are too fast for 'em and it takes 'em longer to get the timing of their swings right. The good fast ball pitchers can throw the ball right by those kind of hitters in the first months. Then fellows like Simmons begin to catch up with 'em."

Washington's hitters in general were complaining of the poor background at Griffith Stadium on opening day when two rookie Philadelphia pitchers were holding 'em to seven hits. The ball came up to the plate against a confusing back drop of white-shirted bleacher fans, they said, and was hard to follow.

Manager Bucky Harris asked Simmons if he had had any trouble following the pitches, and Simmons smiled.

* * * *

"Sure, I had trouble," he said. "Just like the rest of 'em, but I learned long ago never to squawk about it on the bench. Connie Mack taught me that several years ago. It was during a game at Boston and you could hardly see the ball against that white-shirted background.

J. F. O'Connor Guest Speaker At 'G' Banquet

Plans for Georgetown University's annual varsity "G" banquet were completed last night when Comptroller of the Currency, J. F. T. O'Connor, accepted an invitation to address the gathering. The affair will be held next Wednesday night at the Willard Hotel well known as an able and entertaining after-dinner speaker, O'Connor will share the rostrum with Harvey Harman, the University of Pennsylvania football coach.

At North Dakota he won the Palmer Medal for public speaking, the Merrifield oratorical contest; the State intercollegiate contest, and the Clarke Commencement Medal for speaking. At Yale he took the Kent debating prize and Townsend oratorical contest, and was captain of the Eli debating team against Harvard.

Elected to the Legislature in North Dakota in 1916, he was re-elected without opposition in 1918. Prior to his appointment to his present office, he practiced law and was associated with Senator William G. McAdoo from 1925 to 1930. In 1932 he managed President Roosevelt's Southern California campaign.

Browns Win 15-10 Debut Get 22 Hits

White Sox Outslugged in 39-Hit Contest; Clift Has Homer.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 21.—There were 39 hits in the slugfest which the St. Louis Browns won from the Chicago White Sox, 15 to 10, to open the American League baseball season here today, but Rogers Hornsby's home run led all the rest.

Hornsby, nearly 41 and back in active duty at second base after a layoff last season, smashed a home run into the centerfield bleachers back of the flagpole—430 feet from home plate. It started the Browns off on their seven-run fifth inning, which drove the White Sox ace pitcher, Vernon Kennedy, to the showers.

A crowd slightly in excess of 8,000—about half that expected for the season opener, which was postponed from yesterday because of rain—saw the Browns win their first season-inaugural game since 1931. President William Harridge of the American League was present.

Oral Hildebrand, right-hand pitcher obtained from Cleveland in a winter trade in a rebuilding campaign which may make St. Louis a factor in the 1937 pennant race, was found for 17 safeties but pitched the entire game.

The White Sox attack proved most effective in the eighth inning when six runs were scored. Zeke Bonura made four hits in five times at bat and George Rensa, who relieved Luke Sewell as catcher, got two hits in as many trips to the plate.

CLARA MORTENSON.

Feminine Mat Stars to Meet In Arena Bout

Miss Mortensen and Miss Baker will take the mat in an added attraction to the headline one-fall-to-a-finish bout between Ed Meske, the Akron Adonis, and Joe Dusek, of the Nebraska Duseks, who clash in a return match by popular demand.

Appearing at the Arena a few weeks ago on the American Legion show, Miss Mortensen tossed Clarice Davis, of Central City, Iowa, in ten minutes with an airplane spin and scissors.

Miss Mortensen is a pupil of Ray Steele, and has been performing as a pro since she was 14. Today she is 20, blond and attractive.

Meske, now a villain, will unleash the full fury of his rassle madness. He is out to avenge a defeat handed him by the younger Dusek back in March.

Plenty of mayhem will be committed in the other bouts.

Wild George Koverly, conqueror of Laverne Baxter, holder of the Public Enemy No. 1 title, will grapple with George Harben, protege of Frank Spears, in the semiwindup. Koverly is a card, and a drawing card, having incited four riots here.

Ladies' Day on Tap At Stadium Friday

An innovation for ladies' day, with all the earmarks of an opening day ceremony, is planned for the Nats' fair fans when the team meets the Philadelphia Athletics here tomorrow.

With the co-operation of the Business and Professional Women's clubs, Clark Griffith has arranged an elaborate ceremony, including the throwing out of the first ball by Miss Ruth Robinson, president of the club, and band music by the Metropolitan Police Boys Band.

The band will lead a parade to the flag pole, followed by prominent members of the club for the flag raising. Griffith hopes this plan will be followed in other major league cities in an attempt to bolster women's interest in the game.

Nat Bosses Having Flag Exultations

'I Told You So!' Is Griffith Attitude After Beating Yanks in Debut.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, April 21.—Washington preserved its one-game winning streak without a struggle this afternoon. A day-long rain that doused Manhattan washed out the scheduled battle with the Yankees, but Clark Griffith, boss man of the Nats, was exultant despite the dreary scene outdoors.

Griffith, deep in the upholstery of the Nats' hotel headquarters here, was still tingling with satisfaction over his ball team's defeat of the Yankees in the Yankee Stadium opener yesterday, and was on the verge of a loud "I told you so."

The Nats' owner who has maintained throughout the spring that the New York team which won the pennant by 19½ games last season is not invincible, was no less than jubilant.

"If these other teams in the league do not fold up against the Yankees, it's anybody's pennant," said Griffith. "It would have been a close race last season if those other clubs had done nearly as well against New York as we did. Don't forget that my Washington club won more games from the Yanks than any other team in the league.

Reserves No Good.

"With any one of their regulars out of the line-up, the Yanks are just another ball team. They don't have the reserve strength of a lot of clubs in the league. And they need all that hitting they have to offset their weak pitching.

"Don't forget, the only Yankee pitcher who could win 20 games last year—Red Ruffing—isn't with 'em now. It looks like a swell spot for some hustling team to come along and clip the Yanks."

Manager Bucky Harris chimed in in agreement, but Harris was doing a bit of private exulting of his own, as a consequence of MonteWeaver's 3-to-2 triumph over the Yanks on Tuesday.

"Think what Weaver means to a ball team," said Harris. "That game he pitched yesterday was something to see. You could see the old Weaver out there on the mound, getting better as the innings rolled by.

We'll Be Tough.

"I knew Monte was coming along down South, but I didn't dare to hope that he would have all his stuff back. But he did—yesterday. If Monte can pitch that kind of ball for us, we'll be awful tough."

With the prospect of fair weather tomorrow, the Nats and Yanks will resume their struggles at Yankee Stadium. Pete Appleton, who blossomed as the best of the Nats' pitchers lats season, will make his 1937 debut against the No. 1 right-hander of the Yanks, Monte Pearson.

The Nats will be at full strength for tomorrow's game with Cecil Travis, spiked knee now completely healed, back at the shortstop post. Travis, until he was spiked last week, was leading the Nats in both hitting and run-producing.

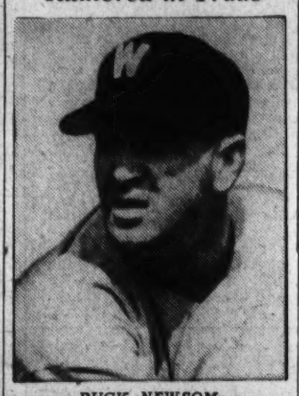
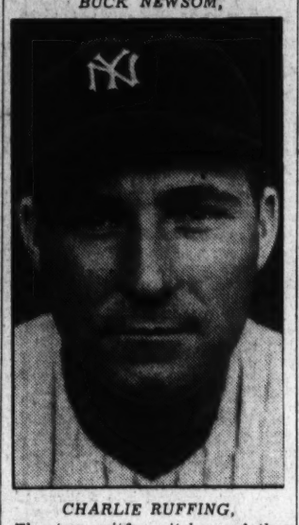
Rumored in Trade



BUCK NEWSOM,



CHARLIE RUFFING,

The two spitfire pitchers of the Nats and Yankees were mentioned today as possible fodder for trade talk between Owner Griffith, of the Nats, and Jake Ruppert, boss of the New Yorkers.

Cavalier Grid Coach to Talk Here Saturday

Alumni to Hear Murray; Scholarships Will Be Discussed.

Frank Murray, the University of Virginia's new football coach, will be the guest of honor at an informal gathering of alumni in Washington and vicinity Saturday night at the Hay-Adams House at 8 o'clock. Murray has just completed spring practice at Charlottesville and is expected to discuss prospects for the 1937 season.

The meeting also will be addressed by Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, director of athletics, who will explain the school's new athletic policies; and by Malcolm Luck, alumni secretary, who will report results of the annual Alderman Alumni Giving Fund.

The most important topic of the conference, however, concerns the establishment of two scholarships, valued at approximately $800 each. The will be awarded on a plan modeled after that sponsored by the Rev. Beverly Tucker, of Richmond, which requires that recipients, in addition to having athletic ability, must have a certificate from his principal or headmaster to the effect that he is a suitable candidate for a college degree, and will make a satisfactory student.

His Failure to Hurl First Game Is Cited

'There Must Be Something in the Wind' Is Belief; Yanks Will Get Better Talker Than Dean If Deal Is Made.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, April 21.—Louie Norman "Buck" Newsom, generally recognized as the best two-fisted talker in the majors, is the subject of considerable conversation himself in baseball circles now a days.

Newsom, the Washington Senators' big right-hander who reminds one of Vic McLaglen, of the movies, is being bandied about along the pullman and lobby grapevine circuit as the pitcher who probably will be traded to the Yankees for Red Ruffing, if Ruffing continues his sit-down strike out in Nokomis, Ill.

Some of the Washington sports writers, visiting in New York, emphasized the fact that Newsom was not called up by Manager Bucky Harris to pitch the Nationals' opening game against the Athletics—despite the fact that he won last year's opener from the Yankees after being hit by a thrown ball in the fifth inning.

"There must be something in the wind," is the way the writing lads from the Capital put it. However, they are cautious about making any point-blank predictions, because Newsom's wife just rented a house in Chevy Chase, a suburb of Washington, for the season.

They say also that if the Yanks do get Newsom, they'll not only be acquiring a mighty good pitcher but one of the most colorful characters in the game.

Buck, a brawny 28-year-old 6-footer from Hartsville, S. C., is described as the "great I am." He is said to be the only man who ever out-talked Dizzy Dean, and a fellow who will admit modestly that "I won the most valuable player award and had the most strikeouts on every circuit I ever played before I hit the big leagues."

Before shifting from the Browns to the Senators in May, 1935, Buck had performed with Wilmington, N. C.; Macon, Ga.; Little Rock, Ark.; Chicago, Jersey City, Reading, Pa., and Los Angeles. He has been around during his nine years in professional ball. Moreover, he is a rugged fellow who has had his left leg broken three times, and who can give an entire Amos and Andy radio skit all by himself, in spite of the objections of listeners.

They say that Buck never tires of telling about that broken left leg. They quote him as saying, "Why—in the winter of '32, just after the Cubs got me, I rolled 225 feet down a mountain in an automobile and busted that leg clean through. I was in bed 11 weeks. And the day I got up, I went over to look at some livestock with my uncle. I was on crutches at the time. My uncle had his little son with him. Well, at the stockyards, one of those mules broke loose, and it looked like he 'was goin' to tromp on the little kid. So I tore in, waving my crutches, and that mule ran right over me. He busted the leg again. And I was back in bed until time to report with the Cubs."

When he went to Washington from the Browns in 1935 that leg was broken again. In his second game with the Nationals he was pitching against the Indians, Earl Averill's line drive hit him in the lek and fractured it. But what did Buck do? He limped about a bit in the third inning, but went right on pitching the full nine frames. Buck claims "that was my toughest assignment." He was in the hospital for nine weeks after that bit of mound work. Well sir, Buck crawled off that hospital cot on a Sunday and on Tuesday he went out and pitched nine full innings against the Yanks.

Ruffing Set to Sign For Truce of $15,500

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—Charles (Red) Ruffing, the big right-hander who won 20 games for the New York Yankees last season, said tonight he was ready to call off his holdout campaign if Owner Jacob Ruppert would give him $15,500 for 1937. Most persistent of the important holdouts, Ruffing had insisted on $16,000.

Sometimes when Buck tells about that left leg, he chuckles a bit and says, "an' they call Gehrig the iron man."

It was back in '34 that Buck outtalked Dizzy Dean. It seems that Buck and Diz were accused of receiving money from a St. Louis furniture store for winning ballgames—in addition to their salaries from the Cardinals and Browns. Judge Landis brought them to Chicago for a hearing. Reporters who covered that hearing insist that poor Diz could hardly get a word in edgewise because the spouting Buck took the floor and held it against all comers. That was the day when Buck really received recognition as baseball's streamlined gabber.

We have it straight from authoritative Washington sources that Buck figures the Yanks won't finish higher than third this season if something isn't done about Ruffing, and that he figures the Nationals will win the flag if the Nats' pitching comes through as expected. And, despite the rise of Bob Feller, Buck admits shyly, "I am still the best pitcher in the American League."

The Evidence:

Baseball men pointed to a chain of evidence that augurs for a deal between the Nats and the Yankees, namely:

(2) Griffith's presence in New York with his Washington team during the past two days.

(3) The Yankees' determination not to sign Ruffing at his present demands and Ruffing's equally emphatic declaration that they must meet his terms.

(4) The fact that the Yankees have coveted the services of Newsom for two seasons.

(5) By friction between Newsom and Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats.

Griffith has denied that he was negotiating for Ruffing, declaring that he never made any offers for a holdout player.

"It is against my policy," he said. game was rained out, could not be reached for a statement on the reported negotiations, but it is known that Manager Joe McCarthy long

Foul Riding Brings Ban On Renick

Matey Makes a Dismal Showing; Double Is Worth But $10.40.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 21.—Mrs. Myrtle Shea's Merry Maker qualified for his engagements in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness by galloping to victory over a muddy track in the Glen Oaks, a mile-and-seventy-yard contest that featured the mid-week program here. In the wake of the gelded son of Cynic were Sunphantom, Court Scandal and Matey. Merry Maker not only disposed of this highly touted opposition, but was under a strong restaining grip in the final sixteenth of a mile.

A slight favorite over Matey, Merry Maker brought his backers a $4.90 mutuel and ran the distance in 1:46 1-5, creditable time under the conditions.

The showing of Walter M. Jeffords' Matey, winner of the Pimlico Futurity last fall through disqualification, was as dismal as the drizzling, cold day. The Man o' War colt, a Preakness candidate, trailed his field from start to finish and, with the exception of going wide at the first turn, had no excuses.

Court Scandal a Little Better.

Court Scandal, winner of the Flamingo Stakes and named for the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, showed to better advantage, being beaten only a neck for second money and coming with a stretch rush that seemed to indicate he needed the longer route of the big stakes.

Sunphantom, running in the colors of Mrs. Charles S. Bromley and not named for the important races, saved ground while taking a lead at the first turn. Court Scandal was closest at this stage, with Merry Maker close up. Midway of the back stretch Merry Maker gradually moved to the front of Sunphantom and once straighened in the stretch opened a long lead.

Charlie Kurtsinger, aboard Merry Maker, did not show up his charge, however, taking him in hand through the final stages, and Merry Maker was under a tight pull at the finish line.

Jocky Sammy Renick, under contract to A. G. Vanderbilt, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for foul riding in the third race that led to the disqualification of Aero. Stewards reported that Renick allowed his mount to cut over on the horse Fyan.

The Bomar Stable's Gold Band upset a group of five sprinters in the Harewood purse, secondary feature of the program. Ridden by Willie Saunders, Gold Band took the measure of Morning by a length and a half with Prairie Dog third. The race was between the two from flagfall to midway of the stretch where Gold Band bounded out to an easy victory. The winner returned a $23.80 pay-off and was clocked for the 6 furlongs in 1:13 4-5, good time for the muddy track.

Upslala Wins First.

Through the haze that covered the infield, the customers saw Upslala, a daughter of Upset, score a handy victory in the opener over a field of juveniles operating over the 4½-furlong course. Running in the colors of E. K. Bryson and installed an odds-on favorite, Upslala took the lead soon after the break to win by four lengths. Bestest was second and Frank Brooke third. The winner, ridden by Harry Richards, was clocked in 0:55 1-5 and paid a $3.70 mutuel.

Ruffing Swap For Newsom Is Reported

has had an affection for the big, fast-balling Newsom, who on occasion has been poison to the Yankees.

That Newsom would welcome the deal is apparent. The big pitcher, who last winter demanded that he be traded by the Nats, is now fairly boiling over Bucky Harris' refusal to start him in the opening game in Washington last Monday.

The temperamental Newsom's ideas of his own importance to the Washington club are several degrees higher than Manager Harris' estimation of his value to the team and Harris would hail a Newsom-for-Ruffing trade as no less than a windfall for the Nats.

"I would not want other club owners trying to acquire players who cannot agree with me on terms."

Always Denies 'Em.

The Nats' owner in the past, however, has had no compunctions about denying trades that were brewing, the most notable of which denials was in 1934 when he said "Any possibility that Joe Cronin would be traded to the Boston Red Sox is absurd."

Ordinarily, the Yankees are a tough club to do business with, but Griffith's hopes of acquiring Ruffing are predicated on Ruppert's penchant for disposing of intractable players. It was only because of personal differences between Manager Joe McCarthy and Ben Chapman that the Nats were able to land the fleet outfielder in a deal for Jake Powell last summer.

Col. Ruppert, who hied himself to his country place after today's

New York's Assembly Approves Dog Racing

Albany, N. Y., April 21 (AP).—Legalized dog racing in New York State was approved by the Assembly today.

The measure, sponsored by Republican Assemblyman Leonard W. Hall, of Nassau, was voted, 120 to 27, and sent to the Senate for further action.

Dog racing, like horse racing, would be placed under the supervision of the State racing commission. The State would receive 15 per cent of the admission receipts.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al:

Once upon a time there was a young man who was left a few thousand dollars. He did not want to work so he decided to make a living playing the races. He needed a lot of money because he was a free spender and liked expensive clothes. At first he won. During the first year he doubled his money despite the fact that he lived in an expensive apartment, ate at only the best places, saw all the shows and fights and had a box for the Sunday ball games throughout the season. The next year he went right on winning. He had hired himself a valet by this time and had purchased an expensive car. The following year he added a chauffeur to his layout and finally crashed society. Of course, his playing the horses in the afternoon sort of crimped his style somewhat but it did not change his luck. As the years passed he went right along winning. Finally he began banking his money. At the end of ten years he had $200,000 invested in "safe" stock. Then came the stock market crash. He lost everything including his shirt. So he began battling the horses again, starting with a $10 bill. Now he is back in the money. He has $100,000 in the bank and a home in Chevy Chase.

BILL.

First race—Swift Flash gets in with 100 pounds and has good off track form as a recommendation in this field. Molasses Bob likes the route and has a little class. Should be the one to beat. Torquil has worked excellently and is dangerous.

Second race—Tedema is Clocker Mike's special. This maiden juvenile has been burning up the track and will win at the first asking, says Mike. Heraldic and Way Out ran good recent races and should complete the money bracket.

Third race—I may be asking too much of this filly, but I'm going to put her right on the top of this heap. I mean Dona Dulcin. She turned in a whale of a race at Bowie and will like the off track. Merrily On and El Bandido to chase her home.

Fourth race—Bungalow has failed several times of late, but I believe this one is about due to run back to one of those keen Oaklawn races. Wandrel's effort the other day was promising. Happy Hostess for the show.

Fifth race—Billy Bee and Wise Prince should battle it out for the main money in this group. I prefer them in the order named. Green Melon can better that last considerably, but not enough to take this.

Sixth race—Relativity and Heartease are a tight fight in this distance group. The first-named has an edge in my book. Sundrops and Sumac, lightly weighted, are possible surprises.

Col. Bradley's Derby Hopes Dealt 2 Blows

By the Associated Press.

Keeneland, Ky., April 21.—Col. E. R. Bradley's hopes for a fifth Kentucky Derby victory were dealt a crushing blow here this afternoon as Billionaire and Brooklyn suffered crushing defeat at the hands of the lightly regarded Grey Gold from the E. W. Duffy stable, in the featured allowance race.

The Bradley entry was backed into 1 to 5 favoritism in the mutuels by the good-sized crowd which braved a slow drizzle, starting shortly after noon. It was obvious from the outset of the 1 1-16 miles that such support was not merited as Grey Gold dashed into a three-length lead in the first quarter. Billionaire was running second and Brooklyn third.

Billionaire pared Grey Gold's lead to a slim length entering the stretch and with Brooklyn closing fast it looked like another one-two for the master of Idle Hour. Both Bradleyites hung, however, and Grey Gold again began drawing clear to be under the wire with two lengths to spare.

Closer observers tabbed the Bradley colts as short, but to many it seemed from their positions at the head of the lane they should have won on their class alone. It also was Grey Gold's first competitive test this year. Old Nassau, Chigre and Al Bubble, all eligible for the Derby, completed the field but none ever was a contender. Al Bubble killed whatever chance he might have had by unseating his rider and running away a half mile at the post.

Grey Gold rewarded his backers at $43.20. His time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:47 1-5. The track was good.

Busby Wins Over Hall In Southern Net Play

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 21 (AP).—Martin Buxby, of Miami, topped the veteran Merrill Hall, of New York, in their quarter final match today in the seventeenth annual Mason-Dixon tennis tourney.

Hall lost 6-2, 6-3, despite brilliant placement.

Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., entered the quarter finals in the women's division by defeating Ottillie Goertner, 6-2, 6-2.

UPSLALA was rushed up on the outside to take command over BESTEST without effort, opened a good lead midway of the stretch and was in hand in the final 50 yards. BESTEST, first away, ran a good race, but was no match for the winner. FRANK BROOKE went evenly but could not threaten. SCOLD raced greenly on the inside throughout. BERTILLON moved up menacingly entering the stretch, but faltered. The others were always outrun.

TOUCHE, off in the first flight, disposed of ALAHAD to take commnad entering the stretch and had to be kept to extreme pressure to hold LUCKY COLOR safe. The latter, shuffled back at the break, moved to the leaders with a rush approaching the stretch, and was gradually wearing down the winner through the stretch. JOAN ASBESTOS dropped back at the break and then gained slowly. BAREBACK, sluggish at the start, closed a gap. ALAHAD had excellent early speed and tired from running with the winner. AFTERMATH unseated Kurtsinger on the way to the post and showed a dull effort.

Colleges Push Work for Relays

D. C. Schools Prepare for Penn Relays

Gallaudet Enters a Mile Team; Maryland's Entry Doubtful.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Preparations for the Penn Relays scheduled Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia were temporarily held up yesterday by rain at all local schools, but promised a break in the weather today they will be resumed on a double-quick schedule.

Gallaudet's entry in the Mason-Dixon Conference mile relay championship was announced last night by Coach Teddy Hughes, who is confident his men will make a good showing although he refuses to predict a victory. The Blues' excellent showing in the quarter and half-mile runs in last week's triangular meet with Catholic University and American University has bolstered their hopes for a victory. Catholic will meet its neighboring rival again in this race.

Team Not Selected.

While Hughes has not definitely selected his team "Cowboy" Burnett, half-mile ace, and Frank Davis, a speedy newcomer, are certain to be included in the line-up. Time trials probably will be held this afternoon to determine the other two men.

At Maryland Coach Geary Eppley is not certain whether he will send a varsity relay team to the games because of slow times recorded in practice runs. If a team is entered it will be composed of Frank Cronin, Bill Theis, Logan Shutz and Joe Peaslee or Ed Miller.

Maryland's freshmen mile team is definitely entered and will be composed of Jack Archer, a brother of Bob Archer, who competed last winter; Jim Kehoe, Mason Kronister, and Allen Miller. The latter is a former Eastern High School star who gives promise of developing into one of the Terps' best men.

Maryland's only other entries are Bill Guckeyson and Alec Males, who will compete in the discus and javelin, respectively. Guckeyson also may enter the javelin lists, but this is highly doubtful as his arm has been giving him trouble and may not be in condition for the strenuous test. Males has shown considerable improvement, although hampered in practice the last few days because of weather conditions, and is expected to make a good showing.

Load Too Much.

Eppley is hesitant about entering a varsity relay team because he figures it might be too much of a load for Frank Cronin, who would run anchor. Cronin and Theis are the only legitimate quarter-milers on the roster. Theis could hold his own, but the others probably would lose much ground which Cronin would have to make up on the last lap, and Eppley thinks it would be asking too much of him to carry two men.

Peaslee is a good half-miler and better miler, Miller a high jumper, and Shutz a sprinter in the process of being converted into a distance man.

The Old Line quartet, incidentally, turned in a 3:22 mile in practice early this week and may pull an upset. One of its opponents, however, is Georgetown's Frosh squad, which holds two indoor victories over the College Parkers.

If Security Trust Co. No. 1 had won the championship they would have retired the trophy which has been in the league for 18 years. It would have been their third victory.

On the Air Today

Nelson Eddy and Jerry Cooper are prominently mentioned in the day's grist of air news. Eddy, who has just closed an eminently successful season in radio, has been signed already for another season—the new Sunday night show starring Don Ameche, Edgar Bergen and Werner Janssen, beginning August 8, at WRC.

This is the original Maj. Bowes Sunday night period, held by the same sponsor after Bowes left, in turn for "Good Will Court" and Haven MacQuarrie's "Do You Want to Be an Actor?"

Cooper, Columbia singing star, is to replace Fred MacMurray as "singing star" of "Hollywood Hotel." Since Dick Powell left the show, MacMurray has been serving as master of ceremonies more than as a singing attraction. Cooper can really sing although nothing is said in the announcement of his also becoming master of ceremonies.

MacMurray goes back to pictures. I think we can all agree that talents lean definitely more to the screen than radio. Cooper, on the other hand, is well established as a ballad singer and widely known to air audiences. Although he has been a constant contributor to Columbia programs since 1934, this will be his first big assignment in a full-hour show. Effective May 7.

Here and there: Broderick and Moore are the first 1937 recipients of the flood of "honors" usually associated with Southern Governors and States holding expositions. They have been made "Embajadores Estraordinaires" by Governor Allred of Texas . . . In case you missed out last Sunday night, the prize for a name for Eddie Cantor's telephone operator went to Susie McKey, a high school girl of Valdosta, Ga. Helen Troy's air name will now be Saymore Saymoore. Susie gets to go to Hollywood with her mother for a long visit as Cantor's personal guests . . . Lowell Thomas goes on a vacation next week and will take in the coronation. He'll broadcast four or five times by short wave from the Continent, although substitute commentators will fill the majority of the time he is away. It will be his first vacation in six years.

One of today's air features you'll not be able to hear because of previous commitments at WJSV, concerns our old friend, "Prof. Quiz." It seems that he propounded a question a week ago—about a monkey on a rope. The answer he gave as the correct one brought down an avalanche of protests from scientists. But the odd thing was that the scientists did not agree among themselves as to the correct answer. So this afternoon at 5:30 C. B. S. will journey down to Madison Square Garden in New York where, with the help of the necessary monkey and other equipment (lent by the Ringling Circus now playing there) the experiment will be conducted exactly as propounded on the air in the first instance. Hans Christian Adamson, of the American Museum of Natural History, and certain distinguished scientific gentlemen will be the judges.

Heavy Receipts Help to Lower Wheat Prices

2 Million Bushels of Grain Are Expected From Duluth.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 21.—Reports that vessel-room has been chartered to bring 2,000,000 bushels of grain to Chicago from Duluth helped drag wheat prices lower late today.

The effect was that earlier upturns of wheat values, 2 cents a bushel in some cases, were more than wiped out, and all-round losses were substituted. Contributing to the late reaction were rains in parts of Canada and in general throughout domestic winter wheat areas, especially Southwest.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@1¼ cents under yesterday's finish: May 1.34⅝@1.34¾, July 1.20¼@1.20⅜, September 1.17⅛@1.17¼; corn 1¼ lower to ½ higher, May 1.28⅜@1.28⅝, July 1.17⅛@1.17¼, September 1.08¾@1.08⅞; oats unchanged to ½ off, May 49½@49⅝, and rye varying from ⅝ decline to ⅛ advance, May 1.11¾. Provisions results were 10 to 15 cents higher.

Pact Cuts Imports Of Japanese Hosiery

New York, April 21 (AP).—An agreement limiting imports of Japanese hosiery into the United States to 1,500,000 dozen pairs a year has been concluded between the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers and the Japan Knitted Goods Exporters' Association, Earl Constantine, managing director of the former, announced today. The agreement, retroactive to January 1, runs for three years.

Inasmuch as Japanese imports into this country totaled 2,144,000 dozen pairs last year, the new quota represents an annual reduction of 30 per cent, Constantine said. Cotton, rayon and cotton-rayon hosiery of all characters are governed.

Cuban-American Sugar Resumes Dividends

New York, April 21 (AP).—The first dividend since 1929 was announced today by Cuban-American Sugar Co. with notice of a $2.50 distribution on the preferred stock, payable May 15 to holders of record May 5.

Oil Output at Highest Level Ever Recorded

Production Is 3,463,550 Barrels Daily for Week of April 17.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—Crude oil production rose 36,050 barrels to the highest level ever recorded at 3,463,550 barrels daily in the week ended April 17, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

California output again dipped, the entire gain being scored in the large producing area east of that State, including Oklahoma and Texas.

Reports received by the institute from 89 per cent of the refining capacity, operating at 78 per cent of potential, indicate 3,055,000 barrels daily were run to stills. This was an increase of 45,000 barrels from last week, when the same group operated at 7 per cent of potential.

Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline at refineries, terminals and in transit were 82,703,000 barrels at the end of the week, against 82,579,000 in the previous period.

Cracked gasoline output for the country as a whole was placed at 690,000 barrels daily, compared with 685,000 barrels last week.

Curb Prices Rise; Pepperell at 150

New York, April 21 (AP).—Buying interest, broadly distributed over the industrial list, resulted in many gains ranging from 1 to 7 points in today's curb market. With favorable opinion of earnings prospects as the chief motive, traders gave attention to oils, electric equipment, textiles, metals and a miscellaneous list of normally inactive specialties. Some utilities also pushed up substantially.

Pepperell, up 10 points in the previous session, gained 7½ more to close at 150. Raymond Concrete ended at 44¼, up 4¼; Singer Manufacturing 305, up 5; Consolidated Mining & Smelting, 82½, up 5¾; American Manufacturing, 52½, up 3¾; Aluminum Co. of America, 160, up 2; Sherwin-Williams, 140, up 2½; Wayne Pump, 44¼, up 1½; American Gas & Electric, 37, up 2½; Creole Petroleum, 34½, up 1½.

There were relatively few declines. McWilliams Dredging and Dow Chemical each dropped a point, and Pan-American Airways, Sunray Oil, Gulf Oil and Cities Service slipped fractionally.

Transactions totaled 299,000 shares, against 277,000 yesterday.

Industrial Earnings Push Stock Prices to Higher Level

Steel, Copper, Rail and Rubber Stock Shares Advance, Some to 1937 Highs; U. S. Bonds Lower.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, April 21.—Buying elements regained some of their courage in today's stock market and leading issues were given a lift of fractions to 3 points generally and a few much more. On the side of the recovery move were numerous highly favorable first-quarter earnings statements and the expressed opinions of company officials at annual meetings that the profits outlook should continue bright if no rift in the current business structure occurs.

Heartening those traders who ventured off the side lines also was a rally in world commodities following their recent slump. While all staples failed to hold at the best levels, most finished well on the upside. Especial buoyancy was shown by rubber and copper futures.

Steel stocks started the ball rolling. Coppers, rails, rubbers and specialties soon joined. Motors, while ahead moderately most of the session, stepped forward briskly in the final hour and were among the top gainers at the close.

There was an assortment of new 1937 highs in the advancing groups, but a handful of lows also was in evidence. Utilities just about held their own. A heavy turnover in low-priced oils found most of these virtually unchanged at the end, although several major petroleum issues did well.

Transfers of 1,248,380 shares compared with 1,127,960 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .9 of a point, at 71.6.

Spurring steels was the overnight announcement of the Carnegie-Illinois Corporation that present prices would hold through the third quarter. This was interpreted as constructive, inasmuch as it will tend to prevent a rush of advance buying and stabilize mill operations. Some let-down in the steel-making was anticipated later, but profits were expected to maintain post-depression momentum.

Consideration of Tuesday's cut in the domestic copper price, coupled with an upturn in red metal quotations abroad, brought support for this group. Most producers, it was recognized, can still make money with copper at the present 14½ cents mark, and it was believed larger demand would be stimulated by keeping the rate around this figure.

Rail Stocks.

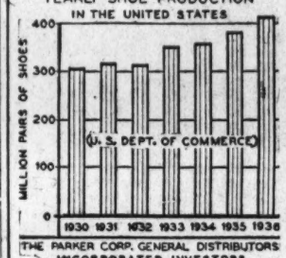
Rails were taken in hand as net operating income of early reporting roads was estimated at some 60 per cent over the same month a year ago. The belated push of the automotive list was attributed partly to an upward revision of previous guesses on earnings for principal manufacturers. In addition it was noted March sales were sharply up over February and the corresponding 1936 period. The right-about-face of rubber futures buoyed stocks in this category. Oils benefited from increased gasoline consumption, although crude production in the past week mounted to a new top.

Outstanding shares on the advance included U. S. Steel at 115⅝; Bethlehem, 93½; Chrysler, 121⅝; General Motors, 61¼; Anaconda, 58; American Smelting, 91⅜; Kennecott, 59; International Nickel, 63½; McIntyre Porcupine, 37⅞; Dome Mines, 44¾, North American, 26⅞; Briggs Mfg., 49¼; Yellow Truck, 32¼; Cleveland Graphite, 44¼; Howe Sound, 84¾; White Motors, 29; Deere, 136; J. I. Case, 167½; Douglas Aircraft, 60¾; United Aircraft, 29⅛; Studebaker, 17⅝; Dupont, 101¾; U. S. Rubber, 65⅛; Pullman, 64½; Standard Oil of N. J., 70⅛; Texas Corporation, 65, and Seaboard Oil, 50⅞.

The comeback of some of the gold-mining issues reflected recent denials by Washington authorities the Treasury anticipated any change in the price of the yellow metal.

Among issues on the offside were American Can, Pacific Gas, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of New Jersey, Standard Brands, Woolworth, General Foods, American Tobacco "B," Reynolds Tobacco "B" and Paramount.

Shoe Output in 1936 Record for Industry



Boston, Mass., April 21.—The total number of shoes produced last year was the largest in the history of the industry, and jumped 8 per cent over 1935 production. Right through the depression shoe factories were relatively busy. Last year's production totaled more than three pairs of shoes for every man, woman and child in the country.

U. S. Bonds Lower.

The buying enthusiasm generated in the bond market by President Roosevelt's budget message Tuesday evaporated into thin air today, bringing confusion to trading sentiment. United States Government loans fell back, as did most of the rails and some industrials in the domestic list. Counter swings, however, were made by many high grades and a scattering of utility and foreign issues.

The partial reversal of form was accompanied by a decided withdrawal of participation, and volume shrank to $11,707,000, face amount, for all bonds against Tuesday's aggregate of $15,707,000. Particularly noticeable was the drying up of activity in the Federal section, where less than $1,000,000 of bonds were traded against more than $3,000,000 the day before.

Carried bonds back-tracked on increased offerings of low and medium priced issues. "Katy" 5s lost 1¼, to 80¾; Nickel Plate 4½s lowered 1, to 89½; Southern Railway 4s dropped 1, to 82, and Alleghany stamped 5s fell 1¾, to 82. A number of good upward swings were recorded, among them Wabash 5s D, up 2⅜ at 42 and the first 5s up 1¾, to 96¼. Rock Island general 4s picked up ¾ and Northwestern 4¾s gained ½. The Associated Press averages for this group, however, lost .3 of a point, to 94.2.

Elsewhere in the list movements were mostly fractional, except for the convertible and other stock privilege types. The industrials were mixed to lower and the utilities uneven to higher. Foreigns, while lightly traded, edged higher.

The American Writing Papers 6s and certificates again back away from a wave of offerings. These issues lost 5½ points, to 56½, and 3½ points, to 58, respectively, in addition to Tuesday's setbacks following refusal of the stock exchange to list the new bonds and stock.

General Foods Net 77.8 Cents In 1st Quarter

Sales Set New Record But Profit Margin Is Smaller.

New York, April 21.—General Foods Corporation reports for the three months ended March 31, 1937, earnings of $4,089,988. This is equal to 77.8 cents a share on the 5,251,440 common shares outstanding and compares with $4,067,150, or 77.4 cents a share for the corresponding three months of 1936.

According to a statement by C. M. Chester, chairman, and Clarence Francis, president, the company in the first quarter of 1937 established a new record for sales volume, but profit margins were narrower than they were last year. General Foods stockholders now total 65,279, average holdings being 80 shares per stockholder.

Commercial Credit Co.

New York, April 21.—Net income of Commercial Credit Co., a financing concern, for the quarter ended March 31 was reported at $3,313,295 after provision for Federal income taxes but before undistributed profits surtax, equal to $1.72 a share on the common stock. This compared with $2,181,919, or $1.64 a share in the like period last year. The company's headquarters is at Baltimore.

National Biscuit Co.

New York, April 21 (AP).—National Biscuit Co. and subsidiaries, operating plants in 32 cities, reported for the March quarter net income of $2,538,757, equal after preferred dividends to 33 cents a share on the common. This compares with $2,917,123, or 39 cents in the first quarter last year.

Telephone Service Points to New High

New York, April 21 (AP).—Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today that at the present rate of station installation growth "it will not be long before the previous high will be exceeded." The previous record high was in 1930 when 15,200,000 telephones were in service.

"It is interesting to note," he said, "that in some sections of the country the previous high development has already been exceeded. This is the case in California, in each of the seven States in the Rocky Mountain section and in Minnesota, Texas and Louisiana. It is also true in seven Southeastern States and in Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia."

"All the Northeastern and North Central States are still below their previous peaks and 20 of the 48 States have more Bell telephones now than on any previous date."

Reo Motor Car Co. Adds Four to Board

Lansing, Mich., April 21 (AP).—The board of directors of the Reo Motor Car Co. raised today from five to nine members by vote of stockholders representing approximately 725,000 shares of common stock, voted to retain the present management. Those returned to office are Donald E. Bates, president and general manager; George Smith, vice president and assistant general manager; George L. Brown, secretary-treasurer, and Dean Parsons, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The stockholders approved the addition to the board the following Eastern financiers who recently purchased a large block of Reo stock: Frank Vanderlip, jr., son of the New York banker; Rowland Campbell, former New York manufacturer; William Loeb, former secretary to President Theodore Roosevelt, and Charles G. Sinclair, also of New York.

$35,000,000 Argentine 4's Offered Today

A group of investment banking houses headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., is offering today $35,000,000 sinking fund external conversion loan 4 per cent bonds of the Argentine Republic. The bonds dated April 15 this year, are due April 15, 1972, and are priced at 89½ per cent and interest.

The offering is part of an issue of $42,000,000 filed with the SEC last month, in which provision is made that a portion may be offered by the underwriters to certain English banks.

The net proceeds from the sale of the bonds will be applied to the retirement of the government's presently outstanding $23,824,500 of external sinking fund 6 per cent gold bonds due October 1, 1959, and $13,887,500 principal amount of Argentine government loan 1926 external sinking fund 6 per cent gold bonds, public works issue of October 1, 1926. The greater part of the proceeds will be in cash and the remainder will be in such of the above mentioned 6 per cent bonds as may be accepted under the exchange offer being made in London. The Argentine government expects to obtain the balance of the requirements for the retirement of the 6 per cent bonds from its current cash resources.

The bonds are redeemable at the option of the Argentine government in whole or in part, but in case of partial redemption only in amounts of not less than $5,000,000 if not for sinking fund, on any interest payment date after at least 30 days' notice at 100 per cent.

Associated with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. as underwriters are: The First Boston Corporation, Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Edward B. Smith & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., Lazard Freres & Company, Inc., Lee Higginson Corporation, Kidder, Peabody & Co., and White, Weld & Co.

Industry Urged To Tell Public Story of Rise

Advertising Drive Vital for Survival of Trade, Publishers Hear.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—Telling and retelling of the story of American industry through newspaper advertising "if the American system is to survive" was urged today before the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Edward S. Friendly, of the New York Sun, chairman of the association's bureau of advertising, told the publishers, here for their golden jubilee convention, that the newspaper is the most logical medium in which to tell the story.

"A necessity could be impressed upon industry that it is just as important to develop good will and understanding in the public mind as it is to sell merchandise."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, cautioned the publishers that freedom of the press must be safeguarded as one of the basic rights guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution. He denounced President Roosevelt's plan for reorganization of the Supreme Court.

"Nothing can be more dangerous to the liberties of any people than to have the press controlled by government, forced to be subservient to officials, appointed perhaps by dictators, as to what facts they may bring to the knowledge of the people, what fables or distortion of fact they must foist upon the public, what opinions they may express to what vile propaganda they must give utterance, and what proper expressions of opinion and warning on questions of public import they must suppress," Senator Clark said.

Drawing a parallel in the method by which Hitler came to power in Germany, Senator Clark attacked the court reorganization plan, asserting it would mean the abolishment of the court and the end of an independent judiciary.

Auto Smashed by Man in 13-Story Death Plunge

Decorator Dies In 13-Story Fall

Baltimore, April 21 (AP).—Gunter Ulack, 27-year-old interior decorator of Delray Beach, Fla., fell or jumped to instant death from his thirteenth-story hotel room today.

His nude body struck the hood of an automobile parked at the curb by the hotel with such force that it broke the spark plugs in the engine. In his room police found his clothing and a number of notes in English and German. One of them, addressed to Miss Claire Hoppe, of Delray Beach, asked her to come to Baltimore to see him and suggested she take an airplane.

Man Predicts Own Death Hour; Buried In Grave He Chose

Orange, N. J., April 21 (AP).—Guiseppe Fiore, 56, foretold his own death almost to the hour, and tonight occupied a grave of his own choosing after funeral rites he also carefully planned.

"This is my last walk," he said as he ambled home after a visit to the graves of old friends.

It was. He died that night—Saturday.

Believing death was near, and not wishing to inconvenience his family when he died. He planned his own funeral a week ago.

Lippmann Assails New Deal's Aims

Baltimore, April 21 (AP).—Categorically assailing New Deal policies and aims, Walter Lippmann, economist and political colunist, asserted tonight "we are faced—now—with the choice between the restoration of constitutional government and a rapid descent into personal government."

Lippmann, in an address before a Johns Hopkins University audience, described monetary powers given President Roosevelt, the Chief Executive's budgetary policy, and other New Deal innovations, as "a colossal delegation of personal power."

Ban Is Proposed On D. C. Nepotism In Bar Committee

The first restriction on nepotism in the District was proposed yesterday by Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, in a bill he introduced upon request.

Seeking to amend section 218 of the District code, the bill is designed primarily to require the appointment of women on the committee on administration and grievances of the District Bar Association. This group passes upon applicants for admission to the local bar.

Besides stating that all members of the committee "shall not be of the same sex," the bill states further:

"And no such person shall be appointed to such committee who is related by blood or marriage to any members of said court, or to any member of such committee, within the third degree, computed by rule of civil law."

Ferry Huffs, Puffs, Tows Away Its Pier

New York, April 21 (AP).—The ferryboat Queens huffed and puffed down the bay toward Staten Island today with part of her Manhattan pier trailing behind.

Through a misunderstanding of signals, the ferry started out before she had been untied and the first thing to give was the superstructure on the pier. She kept right on going, too, and arrived at Staten Island towing a pile of wreckage. A few hours later the quartermaster, Joseph Moran, was suspended pending a hearing on negligence charges.

Yacht Harbor Started.

The Crandall Construction Co., of Baltimore, Md., has started construction of a yacht harbor at Plum Point, Md. The work is expected to be completed within two months.

Rep. Fish to Speak.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Muso-lit Club tomorrow at 8 p. m. His subject will be "The Proposed Change in the United States Supreme Court." Dr. Robert B. Pearson, president of the club, will preside.

Early Completion Of Building Here In NBC Program

New York, April 21 (AP).—A building program calling for expenditure of more than $2,000,000 and affecting six of its radio plants in as many cities was announced today by the National Broadcasting Co.

Included are the immediate construction of new studios at Philadelphia and Schenectady, N. Y., completion of the building under way in Washington and the subsequent provision of new facilities at Hollywood, San Francisco and Cleveland.

At Philadelphia plans provide for breaking of ground within a week for a six-story building to house the N. B. C. studios and offices and station KYW.

The new studios at Washington are to be in operation July 1, doubling present studio capacity there. The cost, including a new transmitter contemplated for WRC, is expected to total $350,000.
